Sierra Club Organizational History

The Sierra Club was founded on May 28, 1892, in the San Francisco office of attorney Warren Olney. In addition to naturalist and author John Muir, the 182 charter members included artists, scientists, university professors, explorers, and cartographers. Their intent, as expressed in the articles of incorporation, was "to explore, enjoy, and render accessible the mountain regions of the Pacific Coast; to publish authentic information concerning them. . .[and] to enlist the support and cooperation of the people and government in preserving the forests and other natural features of the Sierra Nevada."

The club grew slowly and steadily, with many new members recruited on local walks and the month-long High Trip, led for many years by attorney William E. Colby. A Southern California chapter was formed in 1911, and in 1950 the first chapter outside of the state was incorporated. The position of Executive Director began in 1952, when David Ross Brower was hired for the position.

One hundred years after its birth, the Sierra Club is an organization of more than 700,000 members, run by a volunteer Board of directors, with chapters in every state and in Canada. In keeping with the club's original mission, hundreds of national and international outings, led by volunteers, take place each year. The club maintains its headquarters in San Francisco, and has regionally-based conservation staff, a national legislative office in Washington, D.C., and a number of state legislative offices. The club also continues to support its publications program, producing Sierra Club Books, calendars and the club's magazine, Sierra.

Biography of David Ross Brower, Executive Director 1952-1969

David Ross Brower was born in Berkeley, Calif. July 1, 1912. A life-long wilderness enthusiast, climber and skier, Brower was a Sierra Club member since 1933. He served on the Sierra Club Board of Directors from 1941-1952, then served as the club's first executive director from 1952 to 1969.

During his tenure, Brower helped guide the Sierra Club's rise to national prominence, building the organization's membership from 2,000 to 77,000 members. Under his direction, the Sierra Club led the effort to pass the Wilderness Act, halted dam construction that would have flooded Dinosaur National Monument, and pushed for the creation of the Kings Canyon, North Cascades, and Redwoods National Parks, and the Point Reyes and Cape Cod National Seashores. Brower also led the Sierra Club into one of its largest campaigns, the fight against proposed dams in the Grand Canyon; the campaign included a series of innovative full-page ads in the New York Times, that many believe led to the loss of the club's tax exempt status.

From his earliest association with the Sierra Club as the Sierra Club Bulletin editor, Brower pursued an aggressive publishing program at the Sierra Club. He edited and produced numerous club publications, in particular the club's award-winning Exhibit Format Series, which paired writers such as Nancy Newhall, Herman Melville and Robinson Jeffers with photographs by well-known photographers such as Eliot Porter, Ansel Adams, Philip Hyde and Cedric Wright.

Brower's tenure as executive director ended in 1969, with the Board forcing him to resign after a protracted disagreement with members of the Board about the construction of a nuclear facility at Diablo Canyon, and charges of financial irresponsibility. Soon after Brower left the Sierra Club, he announced the formation of Friends of the Earth; he later went on to form Earth Island Institute in 1982. Brower continued his association with the Sierra Club, however, serving on the Board of Directors at various times during the 1980s and 1990s. After a lifelong commitment to conservation, David Brower died on November 5, 2000, at the age of 88, in Berkeley, Calif.

Published works on David Brower, which may be of use to the researcher:

- Biography of Michael L. Fischer, Executive Director 1987-1992
Michael Ludwig Fischer was born May 29, 1940 in Dubuque, Iowa. He has held a number of environmental leadership posts during his career, beginning as a city planner for the City of Mountain View, California, in 1960. For ten years, he was executive director of the California Coastal Commission; worked with Governor Jerry Brown’s Office of Planning and Research. Fischer served as executive director of the national Sierra Club for six years. Campaigns included the Arctic and California Desert, and lobbying in Washington, D. C.

After his tenure at the Sierra Club, Fischer was executive director of the Coastal Conservancy in California, Environment Program Officer for the William and Flora Hewlett Foundation and an environmental consultant.

Biography of Carl Pope, Executive Director 1992-2010

Carl Pope served as Executive Director of the Sierra Club from 1992 until 2010.

Scope and Content of Collection

The Sierra Club Office of the Executive Director Records contain the office files of the Executive Directors of the club. Included are correspondence, memos, board and committee minutes, reports and other documents relating to club administration, policy and procedure. The bulk of the collections pertain to the club’s Conservation Program and includes information about specific projects as well as research files containing reports and other print materials on related issues.

Currently the collection contains the paper of the following Executive Directors: David Ross Brower, the club’s first executive director from 1952-1969; Michael McCloskey; Douglas P. Wheeler; Michael L. Fischer, the club’s fourth executive director from 1987-1992; and Carl Pope, the club’s executive director from 1992-2010.

Series 1: David Ross Brower, 1952-1969

Physical Description: Boxes 1-14, Cartons 1-24, Oversize boxes 1-2, Oversize folders 1-23.

Scope and Contents

The David Brower series reflects the club's growth from a small club to a membership of over 70,000, and documents major environmental campaigns Brower led during his tenure, including the campaigns to block dams flooding Dinosaur National Monument and in the Grand Canyon. Brower was also a major force in the expansion of the club's publications program; this expansion is well documented in production files containing correspondence with photographers, writers, and printers, with particular focus on the Sierra Club Exhibit Format Series. The files also document conflicts between the club's Board of Directors and Brower as he attempted to move the club toward a more international focus, took on larger conservation battles, and continually expanded the publications program.

Arrangement

Arranged hierarchically. Divided into five subseries: Correspondence, Board of Directors, Conservation Program, Publications Program, and Office Files.

Subseries 1.1: Correspondence, 1936-1969

Physical Description: Boxes 1-14; Oversize box 1, folder 1; Oversize folder 1

Scope and Contents

General correspondence constitutes the bulk; letters (often both incoming and outgoing) are arranged alphabetically by last name, then chronologically within each folder. Incoming letter logs, outgoing correspondence, letters of support, and correspondence pertaining to speeches follow general correspondence and are arranged chronologically. Correspondents include Sierra Club membership, directors and supporters; photographers, such as Philip Hyde, Ansel Adams, Eliot Porter, and Cedric Wright, authors and others related to the publications program; legislators, representatives of the state and federal governments, and other political figures; and personal friends.

Correspondence between Board members and club officers can be found in Board of Directors, Subseries 1.2. Correspondence with federal agencies, conservation organizations, regional representatives, and solely pertaining to specific conservation campaigns can be found in Conservation Program, Subseries 1.3. Correspondence with authors and photographers may be located in both this subseries and in Publication Program, Subseries 1.4. Correspondence solely pertaining to the production of a specific Sierra Club book or film is found in Publication Program, Publications, Subseries 1.4.2.

Subseries 1.2: Board of Directors, 1941-1969 (bulk 1952-1969)

Physical Description: Cartons 1-5; Oversize folders 2-4

Scope and Contents
Major issues reflected in this subseries include the proposed reorganization of the Sierra Club Publications Program; the Board's accusations against Brower of fiscal irresponsibility and his defense against the charges; and the club's internal split over the construction of a nuclear plant at Diablo Canyon. All of these issues contributed to Brower's resignation at the request of the Board. Other issues represented in this subseries include the club's loss of their tax-exempt status as a result of their campaign to save the Grand Canyon, in the Legal Committee files; and the campaign to amend the club's by-laws to require all members to sign loyalty oaths.

Arrangement
Further subdivided into Meetings, Correspondence, Policy and Administrative Issues, Committees, Trustees for Conservation, and Sierra Club Council and Chapters.

1.2.1: Meetings, 1953-1969

Arrangement
Arranged chronologically.

1.2.2: Correspondence, 1946-1969

Scope and Contents
Arranged hierarchically. Includes correspondence from officers and directors, such as Edgar Wayburn, Ansel Adams, Lewis F. Clark and Clifford Rudden, memoranda from David Ross Brower to the Board, and memoranda to and from members of the Board's executive committee, officers, and prominent members.

Series 1: David Ross Brower, 1952-1969

Subseries 1.3: Conservation Program, 1933-1969

Physical Description: Cartons 6-19; Oversize box 1, folders 2-8; Oversize folders 2-22

Scope and Contents
Documents Brower's leadership and club strategy on large environmental campaigns such as the struggle to fight the construction of dams on the Colorado River, and the establishment of a number of national parks and wilderness areas. Also documents the evolution of Sierra Club policy on issues such as wilderness, roads in national parks, multiple use, and the club's increasing political participation and influence on matters of environmental protection.

Arrangement
Further subdivided into Conservation Committee, Issues, Federal Agencies, Sierra Club National Legislative Office, Campaigns and Allied Organizations and Conferences.

1.3.1: Conservation Committee, 1947-1969

Scope and Contents
Arranged hierarchically. Includes minutes and transcripts of meetings; copies of correspondence from and to members of the committee from Brower; correspondence from the committee and Brower to the Executive Committee regarding policy, organizational issues, and recommendations for action; and communication with subcommittees.

1.3.5: Campaigns, 1933-1969

Scope and Contents
The campaign files constitute the largest component of the subseries, primarily documenting the club's efforts to preserve Glen Canyon, Rainbow Bridge National Monument, Marble Canyon, and Grand Canyon against dams on the Colorado River, and the fight to halt dam construction that would have flooded Dinosaur National Monument. Campaign files may contain any or all of the following: correspondence, press releases, reports, club publications and mailings, notes and by Brower and other staff and members, legislation, maps, statements, and miscellaneous publications.

Arrangement
Arranged into five geographic regions: California and Nevada, Pacific Northwest, Northeast, Southwest, and Colorado River, with correspondence with the Regional Representatives at the beginning. Campaigns are listed alphabetically, although in some instances, closely related materials are filed together. The California and Nevada campaigns are further organized into National Parks, Seashores and Historical Sites; Wilderness Areas; and California State Parks. Colorado River campaigns are in chronological order, with the Grand Canyon campaign and files of the Grand Canyon Task Force constituting the largest portion.

1.4.2: Publications, 1941-1970

Scope and Contents

Contains materials pertaining to the administration of the program, including general correspondence regarding publications; internal correspondence among staff members; the correspondence of David Hales and Theodore Wilentz, production managers; and correspondence and contracts with printers.

The bulk of the subseries consists of the production files for the club’s publications, including files for the Sierra Club’s Exhibit Format Series, which were conceived of and produced under Brower’s close supervision. Each production file may contain any or all of the following: correspondence with the author, photographer, members of the Publications Committee, and others involved in the book’s editing and publication; contracts with authors and photographers; correspondence with printers; and transcripts, drafts, notes, and proof sheets. Some files may also contain production process related photographs; all original prints by major photographers have been transferred to the Pictorial Collections. The Publications subseries also contains: production files for the Wilderness Conference Proceedings; working files for Unpublished Books; and Book Proposals, which consist mainly of letters of inquiry.

Arrangement

The Publications subseries consists of Administration, containing correspondence pertaining to the production of books and other printed materials, and the Production files for most of the club’s publications. These are arranged into three sections: Books and Guides, arranged chronologically by publication date; Exhibit Format Series, arranged numerically within the series; and Wilderness Conference Proceedings, arranged chronologically. The Publications subseries also contains working files for unpublished books, arranged alphabetically by working title; and book proposals, which consist mainly of letters of inquiry.
