Acquisition Information

The People for the American Way Collection of Conservative Political Ephemera was given to The Bancroft Library by the Center for the Comparative Study of Right Wing Movements, Institute for Study of Societal Issues, University of California, Berkeley in June 2010.

Organizational History

People for the American Way (PFAW) was founded in 1981 by Norman Lear, Barbara Jordan, Father Theodore Hesburgh, and Andrew Heiskell. PFAW is dedicated to promoting equality, freedom of speech, and freedom of religion. Their operational mission includes promoting progressive policies, electing progressive candidates, and holding public officials accountable. Josh Glasstetter from PFAW read in the New York Times about the newly formed Center for the Comparative Study of Right-wing Movements at UC Berkeley. He then contacted the Center's Executive Director, Dr. Lawrence Rosenthal, to inquire about the possibility of the Center providing a home for the PFAW archive of materials pertaining to American right-wing groups and individuals. Dr. Christine Trost, Program Director for the Center, contacted the Bancroft Library to see if they might be interested in processing and housing the collection.

Scope and Content of Collection

This collection is comprised of "Political Ephemera," assembled by the People For the American Way and pertaining to right-wing movements in the United States. The collection documents the ideological orientations, policy positions, talking points, and organizational structures and strategies of hundreds of right-wing organizations, individuals, and publications. A large portion of the collection focuses specifically on documents associated with the "religious right." Of particular interest (due to the scope) are materials pertaining to the American Family Association, Christian Coalition, Coalition for Better TV, Concerned Women for America, Family Research Council, the Moral Majority, and the Pat Robertson Papers. Additionally, there are comprehensive collections of the following publications: Charisma & Christian Life , Chalcedon Report, Chronicle, Focus on the Family, and New American.

The collection consists of three series: Organization Files, Publication Files, and Subject Files. Materials include organizations' and individuals' pamphlets, direct mailings, publications, speeches, conference programs, internal financial records, membership, fundraising strategies, voter guides, manuals, biographies, and publications.
