October 1947
A group of individuals and organizations interested in the problems of migrant workers in the United States met in Washington D.C. and set up an organization called the National Citizen's Council for Migrant Labor.

1947-1950
The Citizen's Council felt that a long-range comprehensive agricultural program should be developed to include the needs of the migrant farm workers and their families. Studying this situation led the council to believe that a more comprehensive, permanent organization was needed to cope with the situation.

March 1950
A group of people closely associated with the National Citizen's Council for Migrant Labor called a meeting in New York City to establish an organization concerned with agricultural labor and rural welfare. Representatives from twenty-two voluntary agencies, individuals, and several government consultants, set up the National Council on Agricultural Life and Labor. A steering committee was elected to create a structure for a permanent organization.

April 1950
It was proposed that the National Citizen's Council for Migrant Labor be discontinued, that its files and financial resources be turned over to the new organization, and that its members give their cooperation to the new organization.

November 1950
The basis for a permanent organization was determined at a national conference and the National Council on Agricultural Life and Labor (NCALL) was established. At this conference, a Board of Directors, including a Chairman, Vice Chairman, Secretary, and Treasurer were chosen.

1950-1966
"The aim of the organization shall be that all people living and working in rural areas of the United States shall participate equitably in the advantages of the American standard of living. To accomplish this aim, the Council will act as a clearing house, focusing its attention on the welfare of individuals and families --migrants, sharecroppers, tenants and family members --who earn their living through agricultural pursuits. Because the problems of farm workers are closely related to the welfare of agriculture and our economy generally, the Council will also be concerned with questions of economics and social import affecting rural areas."
[from the NCALL Labor Bulletin #1: June 1950]

March 1961
The United States Department of Agriculture launched the Rural Areas Development Program (RAD) to provide rural people help in seeking economic improvement. The program was determined to coordinate and focus resources by assisting state, local, private, community, statewide organizations, farm organizations and interested individuals working toward the improvement of underemployed areas.

December 1961
Elizabeth B. Herring, Executive Secretary of NCALL, was asked to serve on the Public Advisory Committee of the Rural Areas Development Program.

1962-1966
Ms. Herring remains active on the Public Advisory Committee as well as the sub-committee on Aging, Dependent, Handicapped and Farm Labor.

January 1967
Reorganization determined the dissolution of NCALL, with constituent organizations forming alternative interest groups.

Scope and Content
The National Council on Agricultural Life and Labor records, 1937-1967, consists of correspondence, notes, original outlines, printed materials, and clippings illustrating the founding of the National Citizens Council for Migrant Labor, and its evolution into the National Council on Agricultural Life and Labor (NCALL). A third component of the collection is dedicated to the United States Department of Agriculture Rural Areas Development Program (RAD) and its connection to NCALL.
Materials associated with each of the councils include correspondence, founding documents, and detailed information on the structure, purpose, and function of each organization. These give a detailed picture of the infrastructure of each council, as well as information on legislation and other organizations that illustrate the councils context and external functions. A questionnaire created by NCALL in 1948 is included along with the results as they were reported to the Council by many state agricultural associations.

Materials associated with the Rural Areas Development Program focus on committees which were linked to NCALL, rather than a comprehensive record of the life of the program. The association between RAD and NCALL was established by Elizabeth B. Herring, Executive Secretary of NCALL, when she was asked to serve on the Public Advisory Committee of RAD, and eventually served on a sub-committee interested in Aging, Dependence and the Handicapped in regard to farm labor. There is information documenting the founding of the Program, but the bulk of the material focuses on the two committees connected to Ms. Herring.

The National Citizens Council for Migrant Labor, the National Council on Agricultural Life and Labor, and the Rural Areas Development Program were dedicated to the collection and dissemination of information regarding the needs and rights of farm labor. The information was gathered to inform the membership, legislators on both the state and national level, and interested citizens. Each series includes extensive research files, which contain newsletters, reports, and other types of printed materials. Aside from the obvious topics concerning agriculture, labor and farm practices, many subject headings focus on family issues, such as education, health, and housing.

AREA DEVELOPMENT ACT, 1958-1959

Scope and Content Note
Arrangement
Arranged chronologically or alphabetically, as appropriate.
Divided into six sub-series: Area Development Act, Area Employment Expansion Committee, Area Development Administration, Rural Areas Development Committee, Subcommittees, and Research Files. Rural Areas Development Committee is further divided into Correspondence (filed by name of writer, and then chronologically), Administration, and Publications. Subcommittees is further divided into Public Advisory and the Committee on Aging, Dependent, Handicapped and Farm Labor. Research Files include 5 sub-subseries: Agricultural Specialists (arranged alphabetically), the 160 Acre Irrigation Limitation and Public Laws 78 and 414 (arranged chronologically), State Files, and Subject Files (arranged alphabetically).

Rather than a comprehensive record of the life of the Rural Areas Development Program (RAD), the series focuses on the development of the program from the initial congressional act to the interim committee and initial development of the program. The majority of materials are dedicated to the committees formed to direct the program, and the sub-committees, Public Advisory and Aging, Dependent, Handicapped and Farm Labor, which were directly linked to NCALL. This series also includes the most varied collection of Research Files, including legislative issues and the 160 Acre Irrigation Limitation.
