Scope and Content

Principal correspondents are nearly equally divided among deaf activists, artists and art world figures, and personal friends and business associates. Among deaf activists are Olof Hanson, a Washington state architect; Jaye Cooke Howard, a Minnesota printer, at various times an elected official of the National Association of the Deaf; George S. Porter, of the New Jersey School for the Deaf and editor of the Silent Worker; Oscar Regensburg, a National Association of the Deaf official; and George Veditz, a Colorado poultry publisher, also active in the NAD. Among art world figures are Karl Bitter, a sculptor and professional art administrator; A. Stirling Calder, Panama-Pacific International Exposition; Eugene Gruet, Jeune, his French founder; Col. James Jackson, the director of the Oregon Volunteers effort; Willis Polk, San Francisco architect; and Lorado Taft, art historian. Among his personal friends are two deaf artists, Theophilus d'Estrella and Granville S. Redmond. Ella Sterling Mighels, who first approached him about a pioneer mother sculpture, became a personal friend and served to critique his literary efforts. There are also a number of correspondents who were in some way connected with the California School for the Deaf. Among these are A. William Caldwell, L. E. Milligan, Elwood A. Stevenson, and Warring Wilkinson. Due to the solicitation of Wilkinson, W. E. Brown became a patron of Tilden's, purchasing The Baseball Player.

Tilden's

Title: outgoing correspondence will have to be found in the collections of the persons to whom he wrote, as he made very few copies of his outgoing letters. In this collection there are only four principal recipients: Brother Cornelius of St. Mary's College, Jack and Charmian London, and Mrs. Wildey Meyers, a friend and booster of his literary efforts. Brother Cornelius' letters are entirely transcripts, prepared by Tilden's daughter Gladys; the location of these originals is not known. The letters to Jack London are also transcripts, made by Miss Tilden from originals in the Huntington Library.

Because of Tilden's deafness, there is a box of written conversations, mostly undated, encompassing various topics relating to his art and interests. Once again, Miss Tilden prepared transcripts for some of the conversations.

Title: Personal and family papers contains biographical information, newspaper clippings, articles about Tilden, his marriage license and divorce Papers, and bills and receipts (one folder from his years in Paris), as well as a file of writings by his mother Catherine Maria Hecox Tilden Brown.

Material from organizations and associations in which Tilden was interested or active is found in Title: Series 4, Associations, 1876-1968.

These are primarily organizations devoted to deaf interests. As a graduate of the California School for the Deaf he was intensely interested in the welfare of the school and in education for the deaf. He was a strong advocate in the separation of the educational facilities of the deaf and the blind, as well as opposing the relocation of the school from Berkeley. He was opposed to the method of education known as oralism and quarreled with the school authorities over the issue. Another squabble with the school erupted over his alleged indebtedness to them. The school's Board of Trustees had extended funds to Tilden to further his education and development as a sculptor abroad. Tilden was under the impression that the money advanced was a scholarship, but the Board considered it a loan. The Bear Hunt, after its exhibit at the Chicago World's Fair in 1893, was shipped to the school. Tilden requested its removal to an exhibit at the Mark Hopkins Institute of Art which was denied, pending payment of the debt. The group still stands on the grounds of the California School for the Deaf, now in Fremont. Miss Tilden continued to clip newspaper articles concerning some of these organizations long after her father's death.

Tilden was a founding member of the California Association of the Deaf, an organization designed to advance the moral, social, and intellectual standing of the deaf in California. About the same time, he became involved in a bitter and long-lasting dispute with the National Association of the Deaf, involving, among other things, the relationship of state associations to the N.A.D. The 13 folders concerning the "Tilden Plan" in this series contain clippings relating to this controversy. In addition, one folder in the Title: Writings series

(carton 4, folder 26) also pertains to the Tilden Plan.

Title: Sculpture and Sketches, 1889-1970, (Series 5), contains a miscellany of contracts, specifications, newspaper clippings, insurance papers, notes, and the like, relating to particular sculptures, whether or not actually cast. The Bear Hunt folders contain a manuscript titled The Amazing History of the Bear Hunt, in which Tilden details his perception of the dispute. Miss Tilden typed and annotated this manuscript as she continued the fight on into the 1950s. The sketches are preliminary works and portray particular sculptures such as The Bridge or ideas such as serpents or architectural ornamentation. Only those titles actually cast into sculpture are italicized.

Title: Writings, 1884-1935, does not contain all of Tilden's published work. Tilden did not always retain copies for himself, or even if he did, he often used the reverse side as writing paper for other purposes. Where it was possible to identify the writing on the reverse, photocopies were made and placed in the appropriate series. Tilden used several pseudonyms, chief among them Zeno. Much of the Zeno writings were mere paragraphs, which appear in a scrapbook and several folders at the end of the published subseries. In the unpublished works there are several drafts of his autobiographical novel, The Autobiography of a Dummy, later titled The Gap, at the urging of Ella Sterling Mighels. In addition there is a Russian novel, Bread Upon the Waters, which, in correspondence to various publishers, he requested be reviewed by a male reader, as a woman reader would probably take offence at his portrayal of women. At the end of the writings series are two folders which contain unidentified fragments.

Title: Five scrapbooks, 1860-1935 were assembled by Tilden's daughter, Gladys, after his death. They give an overview of Tilden's life, and contain photographs, newspaper clippings, bills and receipts, mementos, and other such material. All of the identifications and annotations in the albums were done by Miss Tilden, who continued to add newspaper clippings concerning Tilden and/or his interests to these albums into the 1970s. Correspondence has been removed from the albums and placed in the appropriate correspondence series.

Researchers should be aware that Miss Tilden's papers, also owned by The Bancroft Library, contains correspondence from her father as well as the notes of her own research into Tilden genealogy.

Series 6: Writings, 1884-1935.

Scope and Content Note

Arrangement

Two subseries: and writings, filed chronologically.

Most of Tilden's published writings are from publications for the deaf. Writing under several pseudonyms, Zeno was one he used nearly his entire life. Much of the Zeno writings were mere paragraphs which Tilden collected in a scrapbook. The scrapbook and several folders of similar Zeno material appears at the end of the published subseries.
