Biographical Note
Kathleen Norris was born Kathleen Thompson on July 16, 1880, in San Francisco. Kathleen Norris’s grandparents were California pioneers. Her maternal grandparents -- Paul Moroney and Margaret Sexton Moroney -- originally settled in Marysville in 1851, where Kathleen’s mother, Josephine, was born in 1852. Kathleen Norris’s paternal grandparents -- Frederick Thompson and Maria Teresa O’Keefe Thompson -- arrived in San Francisco circa 1856 after marrying in Hawaii and travelling extensively throughout the world. Her father, James A. Thompson, born in 1845 in Honolulu, became a successful manager of the Donohoe-Kelly Bank. Also an actor and two-time president of the Bohemian Club of San Francisco, he was acquainted with many figures of the literary and theatrical circles then present in the Bay Area. Josephine Moroney and James Alden Thompson were married in 1876. In 1891, the Thompson family moved to Mill Valley in Marin County and built their idyllic home “Treehaven,” which would remain in the family for several generations. Kathleen had one older brother, Joseph, and five younger siblings: Teresa, Francis (who died in childhood), Fred, Margaret and James. The Thompson children received most of their education at home, as their parents eschewed formal schooling, instead encouraging a highly domestic lifestyle that combined household duties with traditional school activities such as reading, writing, and the study of foreign languages. Like all the Thompson children, Kathleen was an avid reader of fiction from a young age. As a storyteller, Kathleen very early displayed the fertile imagination and sense of domestic detail found in the short stories and novels for which she would later become famous. In 1899 Kathleen’s parents died within weeks of one another. Mounting family financial misfortunes culminated shortly after their deaths, leaving the orphaned Thompson children nearly destitute. The children moved to San Francisco, where the three eldest -- Joseph, Kathleen and Teresa -- took odd jobs to support themselves and their other siblings. After working in sales and in various clerical positions, Kathleen found work in the Mechanics’ Library which allowed her more free time to read and write. In 1905, having become more serious about pursuing a writing career, Kathleen attended a literature class offered by the University of California, where she was highly encouraged by her professor. She worked for the Red Cross during the aftermath of the San Francisco earthquake and fire of 1906. From 1907 to 1909 she worked for the San Francisco newspapers The Evening Bulletin, The Call, and The Examiner as a reporter of society events, a job which gave her first hand access to a lifestyle which would be the subject of much of her later fiction. During this time she continued her literary pursuits, having some of her work published in local periodicals. In 1908 Kathleen met Charles G. (“Cigi”) Norris (b. 1880, Chicago; d. 1945, Palo Alto), also an aspiring writer, and the younger brother of the then late novelist Frank Norris. The two were married in early 1909 shortly after moving to New York City. In December of that year, the Norris’s first child, Frank, was born. Years later, Kathleen would give birth to twin daughters, both of whom died only days after birth. In 1918 the Norrises adopted William Rice (“Bill”) Norris. Kathleen Norris’ writing career was greatly advanced in 1909 when The Atlantic Monthly published her story “What Happened to Alanna?,” thus bringing her a long-sought-for national recognition. Thanks in part to Charles’s shrewd business sense acquired from assisting his brother in his publication efforts, the Norris’s literary success quickly increased from this early triumph. Kathleen Norris would eventually publish such popular works as Mother (1911), The Rich Mrs. Burgoyne (1912), Saturday’s Child (1914), Certain People of Importance (1922), Noon, An Autobiography (1925), Little Ships (1925), and What Price Peace? (1928). The themes characterizing much of her work were family relations, domestic life, and various contemporary social issues. Charles Norris’s published fiction -- primarily dealing with social, political and economic issues of his day -- includes Salt (1918), Brass (1921), Seed (1930), and Flint (1944). Kathleen Norris’s social and political convictions led her to help establish such pacifist organizations as the Women’s International League for Peace and Freedom, in the late Twenties; Mothers of America, in the early Thirties; and America First, in the mid-Thirties. The Norrises divided their time between their residences in Saratoga (the ranch “La Estancia”); Palo Alto (now the Newman Club of Stanford University); Port Washington, New York (“Greenblinds”); and the Thompson family residence of “Treehaven” in Mill Valley. Kathleen and Charles G. Norris were also well-known for their expertise in the game of croquet. Kathleen Norris died in 1966. Kathleen Norris’s brother Joseph Thompson had three children -- Joseph (“Joey”), Kathleen, and Jacqueline. Her brother Frederick Thompson had two children -- Helen (“Babs”) and David. Her brother James Thompson had three children -- Josephine, Jane, and Margaret. Kathleen’s sister Teresa, who married the poet William Rose Benet, had three children -- James, Rosemary and Kathleen. (In 1919, Teresa Benet died while pregnant with her fourth child.) Her sister Margaret (“Mark”) and her husband Charles Conway (“Hap”) Hartigan had two children -- Margaret, Jr. (“Bunga”) and Charles Conway, Jr. (“Con”). Kathleen Norris’s son Frank married Alice McCreery and had three children -- Kathleen, Helen (Nell), and Charles Gilman, II. Novelist Frank Norris’s daughter Billy, who spent much time with the Norris family, married Gerald Hermann circa 1922. After many struggles with mental illness, she committed suicide in 1940.

Scope and Content
The Norris family photographs collection contains approximately 2,300 photographs and assorted clippings, drawings, manuscripts and other miscellaneous documents dating from the 1860s to the 1960s. The bulk of the collection is contained in 6 albums assembled and captioned in roughly chronological order by Kathleen Norris. shelved separately according to size.

The collection represents six generations of the families of Kathleen and Charles G. Norris. The primary focus of the collection is the immediate Norris family, especially Kathleen and Charles's son Frank. Also heavily featured are Kathleen's siblings and their children. Several long-time friends of the family are pictured throughout the collection, as are several families distantly related to the Norrises. Countless acquaintances are featured, as well as a growing number of extended family members as the albums progress in time. The collection includes photographs of the parents and grandparents of Kathleen Norris. There are very few photographs of Charles G. Norris's direct family members: one carte de visite of his brother, the popular novelist Frank Norris, taken during his boyhood, and one photograph of his mother being the outstanding exceptions.

Activities represented in the collection are primarily leisurely and family-oriented, including parties, travel, recreational outings, domestic activities, as well as other more formal social functions.

California locales featured in the collection include Mill Valley, San Francisco, Saratoga, Palo Alto, Berkeley, Santa Cruz, Carmel, Monterey, Santa Barbara, Bohemian Grove, Benicia and Yosemite. Other United States locations include Long Island, New York; Augusta, Georgia; Annapolis, Maryland; and Chicago, Illinois. The collection also features locales in Italy, Brazil, England, France, Monaco, Switzerland, and Portugal's Madeira Islands.

Notable persons appearing in the collection include William Rose Benet (husband of Kathleen's sister Teresa), Edna Ferber, Fanny Hurst, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Jack London, Noel Coward, Samuel Goldwyn, and George Creel. Also included is a letter from U.S. General Douglas MacArthur to Kathleen Norris regarding prospects for world peace.

Notable San Francisco Bay Area photographers represented in the collection include Arnold Genthe, Gabriel Moulin, and I.W. Taber.

In addition to photographs, the collection also contains many periodical clippings, manuscript poems, drawings, letters, notes, invitations, greeting cards, etc. The albums' thorough captioning by Kathleen Norris reveals her wit and her tremendous affection for her family and friends. The albums lack several photographs originally glued to pages. As there appear to be some considerable chronological gaps between the otherwise comprehensive albums, it is likely that other albums were created that are lacking in the present collection. In devising descriptive captions for the container listing, the attempt has been made to provide the last name of the subject at the time the original photograph was taken. (For example, Kathleen Norris will be referred to as Kathleen Thompson in all photographs of her taken prior to her marriage to Charles G. Norris in 1909.)

Divorced by J.S.T. in '31 (one of the first Reno divorces) to make way to his marriage to Germaine Requet -- whom he met on a railroad train. She was teaching at Utah State? Germaine came from a silk manufacturing co. in Lyon, France. Father was so dominant that she and sister Suzanne fled to U.S.A. Margie lived in those days in a house on Pacific between Lyon and Presidio -- 3155? Grey with driveway. Her bedroom was a staggerer to me in my youth. [Illegible] white satin, gorgeous view, mirrored French chests etc. She had tea with gents like George Garrett and when Joe came home, she said, "Go away, Joe. I'm busy." The classic was her new LaSalle car. When asked, she said, "Kathy and nine months." After the divorce everyone thought she'd remarry -- but she fell apart at once. Presently at the Brockleban's and sitting on l/2 mil. $. 2/68 [i.e. 1968]. [Reproduction of painting by Gedekowski, 1924.]
