Biography

The Daily Californian has its roots in The College Echo, published by the Durant Rhetorical Society at the College of California before the founding of the University of California. The society continued the publication after the formation of the university and the move to the Berkeley campus site as The University Echo. The Neolaean Literary Society began the Neolaean Review in March 1873, and the two publications merged in January 1874 as The Berkeleyan. There was a gap in the publication from 1888 through 1892; a new series of The Berkeleyan was begun in 1893. The name was changed to The Californian in 1897, and in October of that same year it became the Daily Californian.

The index to the Daily Californian, including its predecessor The Berkeleyan, is in three parts. The oldest chronological coverage extends from the beginning of the through 1929. This was done retrospectively between 1972 and 1982 in University Archives. The original index cards are in University Archives, and a film copy of the index is in the Newspaper/Microform room (MICROFILM 20031 (3 reels)). Although the index is very detailed, volume and issue numbers were used instead of dates through approximately 1906, making going from the index to the articles somewhat difficult. There is a volume-date concordance for The Berkeleyan at the beginning of each reel, but none for issues of The Californian or Daily Californian.

The next chronological section of the index, covering the period 1930 through June 1991, is in a card file in Doe Library. It was apparently begun by and continued by the General Reference Department of the library until about 1989. At that time because of lack of personnel the department discontinued the index, and University Archives assumed the responsibility of indexing it in the same card file until June 1991, when lack of personnel forced a change in format. The index is in two chronological periods, 1929-1979, and 1980-1991; in 1980 more general subject headings began to be used and a new alphabet was started. Under some subject headings it is apparent that there is a gap in the indexing, particularly in the 1930s, but there appears to be no documentation of breaks in the indexing.

The last chronological sequence covers July 1991 through June 1994. The index was compiled using a word processing program. The resulting document was printed and a copy was supplied to both the Newspaper/Microform room and to Humanities/Area Studies; it is cataloged with the call number AJ21.D29. It is only this final portion of the index that is presented here.

Note

The index to the Daily Californian does not include the following categories of articles:

1. Editorials and letters to the editors
2. Wire service stories not originating locally
3. National sports stories even if written locally
4. Short sports notices announcing forthcoming games
5. Beginning in 1993, crime stories with no UC connection
