Abstract: Photographic prints, negatives, and slides by Miles R. Everitt, a Los Angeles photographer. The bulk of his works date from the early 1960s to the late 1980s. He primarily photographed African-American nude male models. Fearing he would lose his position as an electrical engineer for the city of Los Angeles and later in the aerospace industry, Everitt never publically displayed his photography. However a small number of buyers, photographers, and publishers knew of his works including Robert Mapplethorpe. In the late 1970s or early 1980s, Everitt met Mapplethorpe when he visited Los Angeles. Everitt died of heart disease in April 1994.

Biography

Miles R. Everitt was a Los Angeles photographer of African-American nude models primarily from the late 1950s into the early 1990s. He learned to develop his own film and slides to avoid the censorship and confiscation of works by film developers. Everitt has been credited with developing the technique of shooting African-Americans using a black background, however this remains unsubstantiated.

He was born in 1912 in Oregon to Mrs. Louie Everitt, née Tillock and Mr. Fredrick Everitt. The family relocated to Los Angeles between 1920 and 1930. In the early 1930s Everitt came to know members of the f/64 Group. According to 1940 United States census records, he resided with his parents in the family home at 5735 Alviso Avenue in Los Angeles. The census record described his occupation as "telephone equipment installation" and that he had completed his third year of college. A second entry in the census listed a Miles Everitt with the same birth year and state, living in boarding house in San Diego, California. In the summer of 1941, he was selected for service as a warrant officer and appears to have served in the Army Airways Communication Service (AACS) through the duration of World War II.

Photographs in the collection document his travel to Iceland and Europe during the period 1943-1945; later photographs document his attendance at a reunion of the AACS alumni. After the war he primarily photographed African-American male models. A small number of buyers, photographers, and publishers knew of his works. The Jack Fritscher and Patricia Morrisroe biographies of Robert Mapplethorpe mention the meeting of Everitt and Robert Mapplethorpe in Los Angeles during the late 1970s or early 1980s. Everitt died of heart disease in April 1994.

Processing Information

Collection processed by Arthur Eads, Bradley Brady, Ian Stulberg, and Michael C. Oliveira, January 2013.

A portion of the collection was processed prior to 2006 by Mitch Walker. The mounted photographic prints were cataloged into the ONE database using a "4ME" item number. A majority of the color 35mm slides were cataloged into the database using a "7ME" item number. The majority of stereo slides were also cataloged into the database using a "7ME9" item number.

Everitt encoded the mounted slides with a pattern of dots/colors on the top edge of the slide mount to identify the model. The chart to decode the patterns is in box 19, folders 1-2.
