Abstract: This collection (1988-1999) is made up of research materials including newspaper clippings and health reports used for Christy Beaudin's 1997 dissertation, "Determinants of utilization in a community-based AIDS service organization." Christy Beaudin's professional life has been devoted to promoting quality health care in a myriad of clinical settings. She is the author of several peer-reviewed journals, book chapters, case studies, and medical reports.

Biographical / Historical
Christy Beaudin received her PhD from the UCLA School of Public Health, her LCSW from San Diego State University, and a bachelors degree in criminal justice from California State University, San Bernadino. She is the author of 27 peer-reviewed articles in journals, book chapters, and case studies; along with 24 articles in other publications, studies, and reports. In 2005, Beaudin received the "Golden Pen Award" from the National Association for Health Care Quality for the article, "Using the Quality Improvement Committee to Establish Accountability and Yield Results,” that appeared in the 2004 Journal for Health and Quality. Beaudin is a frequent speaker at national meetings and conferences pertaining to public health.

She is the former Vice President and Chief Quality Officer for Children’s Hospital Los Angeles (2006-2010) and National Director of Quality for the AIDS Healthcare Foundation (2011-2014). Beaudin currently serves as Vice President of Prototypes, a program that serves women, children, and communities impacted by substance abuse.
