Abstract: 1185 Design is a Silicon Valley brand agency founded by Peggy Burke in 1985. The 1185 Design records consist of material created for the agency's clients between 1985 and 2017. The majority of the collection is made up of "initial creative books," which were produced with some input from clients to establish or explore brand identity and marketing strategies. The remainder of the collection is made up of product samples, or clients' end products. These are divided into two subseries. The text subseries consists strictly of textual and graphical materials, while the software subseries is made up primarily of packaged software.

creator: 1185 Design.

Biographical/Historical Note

1185 Design is a digital brand agency located in Palo Alto, California that was founded by Peggy Burke. Burke, a native of Cincinnati, Ohio and 1980 graduate (BS, Graphic Design) of the Design, Architecture, Art, and Planning department at the University of Cincinnati moved to California in 1983 to take a job with Boole and Babbage. Burke worked as Creative Director for their in-house design group which led to her decision to begin her own startup with the launching of 1185 Design in November 1985 (hence the company's name). Initially consisting of Burke as the lone staff member and serving clients mostly located in and around Silicon Valley, 1185's initial emphasis was on technology startups and venture capital firms. Among the company's early clients were Motorola, Adobe, Sun Systems, and Cisco.

As 1185 Design entered the 1990's, it expanded its client base to biotech, nonprofit, and consumer markets with a specialization in areas such as corporate identity, brand strategy and narratives, and digital experience and execution. The company had grown to 60 employees with offices in Palo Alto, California and Portland, Maine, but the dot-com downturn forced 1185 to cut its workforce down to 30 employees and close its east coast office in 2001. With the second boom in Silicon Valley, 1185 further expanded its client base and came into the digital age with fewer products such as printed publications and packaging and more emphasis on digital advertising, user experience evaluations, corporate branding, and web and mobile design. As of 2019, 1185 Design is still in business.

Scope and Content of the Collection

The 1185 Design records consist of initial creative books and both text and software product samples. The initial creative books make up roughly two-thirds of the collection. These books are created in the first stages of the design process, often with feedback from clients that are expressed in handwritten notes within the books. The books primarily explore different areas designated by 1185 Design, including logos, corporate identity, and website design. However, some books are simply preliminary ideas sketched out for clients, and others focus on a single product or package. The books are then reviewed by the client, notes and changes are made, and if the client decides to go forward, a design direction is selected or developed over a series of revisions.

The remaining third of the collection consists of product samples, which are end products of the design process. These materials are divided into two subseries. Text product samples are made up strictly of text and graphical materials, such as annual reports, invitations, brochures, pamphlets, and other advertising material. The software subseries consists mainly of packaged software by such companies as Adobe and Cisco, but there is also a number of print materials with supplemental software included in this series.

The collection does not contain files or notes from the meetings with clients that take place any time within the design process. 1185 Design signs a non-disclosure agreement with clients, so the only materials retained from projects are the initial creative books and end products.

Initial creative books, Series 1, 1994-2017
Series Scope and Content

This series consists of initial creative books prepared for clients, which present potential branding opportunities, explore brand identity, present options for logo design, explicate brand values and mission statements, and represent how these and other brand-based elements can be portrayed in web-based or digital environments. The books are generated during the design process, which typically begins when 1185 staff meets with a client to get a sense of their needs and goals. After this meeting, multiple designers work on different design directions, and print and bind the various design possibilities into the initial creative book(s). The books are then presented to the client for review whereby notes and changes can be made, and a design direction is selected.

The amount of work put into design options in the creative books varies from client to client. In some cases, clients submit a request for a high-level mock up of branding options, and 1185 gave these books no title other than the client's name. These books have been referred to as preliminary books because of their general nature that points the client into possible directions. The majority of the initial creative books have been given designations that explore different facets of branding, brand identity, and branding opportunities.

360 books are strictly textual and are often concerned with a specific product. In some cases, they contain self-contained slogans that are aligned with the values of the brand, and in other cases, they contain stand-alone sentences broken up between pages to punctuate the brand's message.

Corporate identity initial creative books present different logo ideas, sometimes with annotations about the logos and presenting the logos as they might appear in a variety of possible mediums such as business cards, brochures, tote bags, cellular phone cases, etc.

Logos, logo exploration, and logo iterations initial creative books are similar to corporate identity books, except that they tend to work with logos that are pre-established at the time of the books' creations, and then present them in a variety of possible physical formats.

Look and Feel initial creative books list the goals and objectives of the client, and strive to establish such things as brand identity and target audience. This is followed by a visual mock up of how these elements can be conveyed in different ways within a digital environment.

Point of View initial creative books are something of a hybrid of the look and feel and corporate identity books. They often begin with the different key ideas that are established with the client with regard to brand identity and the key messages that should be conveyed. This is followed by a mock up of different logo ideas that are meant to convey those attributes.

Website initial creative books are similar to look and feel books, but are more comprehensive. In addition to brand identity and target audience, website books take into account such objectives as web presentation and content, and the competitive landscape the given client is operating within. Additionally, the books provide an analysis of clients' current websites and tend to present actual copy rather than Lorem Ipsum text.

This series is arranged alphabetically by company name.

Product samples, Series 2, Bulk, 1988-2008 1985-2017

Series Scope and Content

This series consists of the end products produced by 1185 Design for clients and which could serve as product samples for 1185's branding portfolio. Included are brochures, booklets, public relations literature, and various promotional materials as well as packaging for software and various commodities.

Arrangement

This series is arranged into two subseries:

Subseries 2.1, Text, 1985-2017, bulk 1992-2008

Subseries 2.2, Software, 1988-2016, bulk 1991-2001

Text, Subseries 2.1, Bulk, 1992-2008 1985-2017Subseries scope and Content

This subseries includes promotional items, annual reports and strategic plans, informational brochures and pamphlets, and conference items and signs. While much of this material reflects 1185's work for start-ups and venture capitalists around Silicon Valley before and during the first tech boom, there is also a small assortment of non-tech company product samples. This subseries is arranged alphabetically by only the first letter of the company name. The individual company names can be found in the descriptive comments for each catalog record in the online catalog.

Software, Subseries 2.2, Bulk, 1991-2001 1988-2016Subseries scope and Content

This subseries consists of packaged software and a small assortment of packages that include supplemental software. While the bulk of the subseries consists of packaged software from clients such as Adobe, Cisco, and Sun Microsystems, there are also product samples for non-tech clients with software that accompanied text. Much of the packaged software product samples were kept by 1185 without the software included, so only the packaging remains. This series is arranged alphabetically by product title.
