Historical note
Pepperdine University is accredited by WASC, the Western Association of Schools and Colleges. Pepperdine College was first accredited in 1949, by an earlier accreditation board. Accreditation is an ongoing process requiring significant data collection, many reports, and visits by WASC staff to Pepperdine's campuses. The process is designed to provide data and information for better understanding university goals, infrastructure, processes, and its own progress. (Five other academic bodies also accredit Pepperdine, but the majority of the reports are from WASC.) WASC was formed in 1962, and accredited all institutions previously accredited by the Association of American Universities, North Central Association.

Scope and Content
The collection contains files related to accreditation of Pepperdine College and Pepperdine University from 1938 to 2005. Most items are reports submitted to the Western Association of Schools and Colleges (WASC) or the previous accreditation body, the Western College Association and the California State Board of Education, or reports returned to Pepperdine after accreditation visits and evaluations. Other items include articles, correspondence, memoranda, and meeting minutes related to the accreditation of Pepperdine.

Arrangement
The collection is organized into the following series: 1. Reports and Publications and 2. Correspondence, Memoranda, and Meeting Minutes. Within each series, folders are arranged in chronological order.

Related Archival Materials
Other collections with files about accreditation include the Howard A. White Papers and the M. Norvel and Helen Young Papers.

Processing Information note
