Biographical / Historical

The Malibou Lake Mountain Club is a private, secluded community located in the Santa Monica Mountains, northwest of Los Angeles and west of Malibu. Founded in 1922 by businessmen George Wilson and Bertram Lackey, the club attracted upper-middle-class Angelenos looking for a rustic escape from the bustling young city. Membership included use of the Clubhouse, a grand stone and redwood lodge designed by architectural firm Russell & Alpaugh of Los Angeles which burned down in 1936 and was replaced by a smaller lodge designed by the same firm. Members were also invited to various events hosted by the club, such as holiday dinners and dances, and were given free use of the lake for boating and fishing. "Licensee" members additionally were entitled to the use of a specific lot of land on which they could build their own cabin or dock.

Bertram and Lackey managed to sell dozens of memberships in the early years, despite a drought preventing the filling of the lake until 1926. In December of 1926, members optioned to purchase the Club and land from Bertram and Lackey, incorporating the Club as a member-owned and operated community led by an elected Board of Directors. As their website claims, "We are a corporation disguised as a community. Or perhaps we are a community disguised as a corporation."

The community's history is well documented in their long-running bulletin, which began as a newsletter written by Bertram and Lackey to their club members and continued publication into the 21st century. The bulletin is remarkably consistent for a community-created resource, thanks in part to Frank J. "Old Man Malibou" Earls, a member who served as editor for over forty years. The bulletin informed residents of upcoming events and reported on past ones, shared newsworthy announcements like births, marriages, and deaths, and, occasionally, became an outlet for expressing controversial opinions about club management.

Due to their proximity to Hollywood, the Malibou Lake Mountain Club has long enjoyed a fruitful relationship with the film industry. The idyllic lake has served as the location of over 100 films, and many more TV shows and commercials. Moreover, many members have worked in various aspects of the film industry, including cinematographer Arthur Edeson, actor Ray Bolger (best known as the Scarecrow in the Wizard of Oz), British character actor Sir Guy Standing, and writer and filmmaker Andrew Sinclair.

Over the decades, Malibou Lake Mountain Club members have fought to preserve their sheltered community from both internal and external threats. The Club has been embroiled in lawsuits, faced financial difficulties, and weathered internal struggles over Club leadership and identity. The Club has also survived many natural disasters, from droughts and mudslides to floods and fires. On December 9, 2018, the Woolsey Fire devastated the Santa Monica Mountains and burned through the Malibou Lake Mountain Club, destroying several homes and structures, although the Clubhouse and many more homes survived.

Series 1: Bulletins and Newsletters 1922-1984

Scope and Contents

This series contains the Malibou Lake Mountain Club Bulletin (sometimes called Newsletter) for the years 1922-1984. This publication served as a community news source, and covered a variety of subjects, including: updates from the Board of Directors, mainly about the Club's finances; details about Club events and promotions for upcoming events; news and updates about members, such as births, marriages, travel experiences, and deaths; information about local events such as fires, construction, and mountain lion attacks; club history, mainly written by editor Frank J. Earls, also known as "Old Man Malibu"; and records of Malibou Lake's use as a filming location for commercials, TV shows, and movies. Also included are related special publications, including a booklet celebrating Malibou Lake Mountain Club's 60th anniversary, a map of the planned Mulholland Highway expansion, and a 1924 poster for a competition to bring in new Club members.

Many of the items in this collection, especially the older bulletins, are photocopies of the originals. The bulletins and newsletters arrived in folders labeled "Joyce Moe Collection." Each folder still contains a printed list of the contents of each folder, titled "Joyce Moe Collection". Joyce Moe served as editor of the bulletin from 1974-1984.

Series 2: Correspondence 1924 May - 1975 December

Scope and Contents

The correspondence series contains the written correspondence of the Malibou Lake Mountain Club, largely between the Club's management or the Board of Directors and external vendors and local government. Many of the items are onionskin paper copies of letters sent by the Club. While there remain some letters between the Club and members, most member correspondence was moved to the respective member's folder.

Arrangement

Original order has been preserved; as such, the first subseries, Pre-1960, is arranged alphabetically. The second subseries, Post-1960, is arranged chronologically by year.
