Biography/Administrative History
Thomas Lee Osborn (born December 23, 1923 – died February 14, 2013) is an American Pentecostal evangelist and author. He married Daisy Washburn Osborn in 1942 and they worked together as evangelists in the Pentecostal Church of God denomination. In 1944 they moved to Oregon and founded Mantaville Tabernacle which they pastored until 1945 when they were sent by the Church as missionaries to India. Returning to Oregon in 1946, they attended a William Branham healing meeting and became affiliated with his organization, Voice of Healing. Between 1950 and 1964 the couple held large crusades in 40 countries, many featuring dramatic healings and largescale evangelism. In 1956 they began to publish Faith Digest which reported on many of these crusades. In the sixties the Osborns turned their attention to teaching and Daisy spoke to women worldwide. They published books, videos and audio cassettes of their teachings. Many of these were translated into a multitude of other languages.
