Biography
Frank Jordan (1935- ) is a foundation executive and former San Francisco Mayor and Chief of Police.
Francis Michael ("Frank") Jordan was born in San Francisco in 1935, to Irish immigrant parents, Frank and Margaret Jordan. His father was a painter and brewery foreman. They had two sons and a daughter; Frances was the middle child. The family lived in the outskirts of the Mission District. His mother died when he was 10, and the three children lived with family friends until the family was reunited five years later.
Frank graduated from Sacred Heart High School (founded by the Christian Brothers of the Catholic Church) in 1953, served in the U.S. Army for in Germany for two years, then joined the Police force in 1957. He earned his bachelor's degree in government from the University of San Francisco in 1975, after years of attending night school while a member of the Police Department.
Jordan rose through the department ranks, establishing the Senior Escort Outreach Program, and running the neighborhood safety awareness program, along the way. In 1986, Mayor Dianne Feinstein appointed Jordan Chief of Police. He had a reputation as a trouble-shooter, and after two years on the job, he said, “If you’re looking at compassion and courtesy, I think that’s a strength. Sure, I’ll make the tough decisions, and I’m not afraid to make them.” He retired four years later, in 1990.

He joined the 1991 race for mayor, pledging to be a "citizen mayor," and to clean the streets and fight aggressive panhandling. He was elected with a 52-to-48 percent margin in his first run for elected office, a political upset over one-term mayor Art Agnos.

Jordan had three sons with his first wife, Breda; they were married from 1965 to 1989. He married investment banker Wendy Paskin in his City Hall office in 1992.

When he took office in 1992, he faced the worst budget troubles in the city’s history and the possible departure of the San Francisco Giants. Other issues included the AIDS epidemic, a newspaper strike (in 1994), the conversion of the Presidio to the Golden Gate National Recreation Area, and the extension of BART to the San Francisco Airport. He lost in his 1995 re-election bid to Willie L. Brown.

In remarks before the Municipal Executives Association in 1995, Jordan said his single proudest accomplishment as mayor was to balance the budget for the prior three years while maintaining essential city services.

Scope and Contents

This collection documents the mayoral career of Frank Jordan who served as the 40th Mayor of San Francisco, from 1992 to 1996. Materials include correspondence, reports, briefing papers, speeches, photographs, and press releases. Subjects include budget difficulties from 1992 to 1994, and significant layoffs in 1993. Other topics include the 1992 shooting massacre at 101 California Street; the mayor’s support of the proposed federal Brady Bill (handgun violence prevention); efforts to keep the San Francisco Giants in the city; extension of the 1988 Fire Department consent decree covering department hiring; the airport master plan and BART (Bay Area Rapid Transit) to the airport; and Treasure Island and Presidio reuse.

There is also coverage of the homelessness problem, as well as the Mayor’s response. In October of 1993, the Mayor instituted his controversial Matrix program, initially targeting crime in specific police districts. Police resources were reallocated to address "quality of life" crimes including aggressive panhandling, trespassing, public intoxication, and sleeping in public parks. Officers were to clear the streets of homeless camps and aggressive panhandlers, and steer them into housing and counseling programs.

There is some coverage of the AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) health crisis, and the City’s needle exchange program. In 1992, the Mayor created legislation to stem the spread of AIDS through a needle exchange program; then-Governor Pete Wilson vetoed the legislation. The next year, Mayor Jordan declared a public health emergency and moved forward with the program, the first city to publicly fund such a program, defying state law in the process.

Other subjects include the airport master plan and BART (Bay Area Rapid Transit) to the airport; San Francisco Giants’ sale and a downtown stadium; and Treasure Island and Presidio reuse.

There is no campaign series. However, some materials documenting Jordan’s Mayoral runs can be found throughout the collection. There is ephemera and a speech from his 1991 run, in the Chief of Operations subseries (of the Legislative and Administrative Files series) and Speeches series, respectively. 1995 reelection campaign files are included in the Subject and Administrative subseries of the Legislative and Administrative Files series; Mayor’s Office of Business and Community Services series; Speeches series; and Public Relations Special Assistant subseries.

Photographs mainly consist of swearing-in ceremonies of appointees.

Arrangement

The collection is organized into five series: Series 1: Legislative and Administrative Files; Series 2: Mayor’s Office of Business and Community Services; Series 3: Speeches; Series 4: Public Relations; and Series 5: Photographs. Series 1 is organized into four subseries: Subseries 1A: Mayor’s Files; Subseries 1B: Subject and Administrative Files; Subseries 1C: Chief of Operations; and Subseries 1D: Clean City Program. is organized into two subseries: Subseries A: Special Assistant; and Subseries B: Press Releases.

Within series and subseries, arrangement is alphabetical by subject, except for Press Releases, which are in chronological order.

Subseries 1B Subject and Administrative Files 1989-1995

Physical Description: 12 Cubic Feet

Scope and Contents

Kept by legislative aides, very similar to Mayor's Files in scope, with correspondence and memoranda, reports, briefing papers, speeches, and memoranda. Includes some outgoing constituent correspondence. Subjects include homeless and Matrix program, charter reform, immigrant rights, San Francisco Giants sale and a downtown stadium, welfare reform, Treasure Island reuse, and no-smoking ordinance.

Actions documented include the mayor's veto of a measure passed by the Board of Supervisors which denounced anti-immigrant sentiment in the state; the board then overrode that veto. Meanwhile, in 1992, the City successfully petitioned Major League Baseball owners to reject the team's proposed move to Florida. New ownership was organized and the team remained in San Francisco.

Historical Note
In 1993, the Citizens Assistance Center and part of the Mayor's Office of Business and Economic Development merged to become the Mayor's Office of Business and Community Services.

Scope and Contents
Contains files of Linda Mjellem, Director of Business and Community Services. Includes neighborhood outreach and Matrix Program files. Matrix was the name of the mayor's homeless program, described as a "quality of life enforcement program." The Mayoral reelection campaign is covered. Also includes files on the city's (unsuccessful) funding request to cover business losses following the 1992 not-guilty verdict in the beating of Rodney King.

Series 3 Speeches 1992-1995

Physical Description: 2 Cubic Feet

Scope and Contents

Topics include AIDS, budget, city employees’ "pay for performance," economic development, homelessness, housing, and international business. In one speech, the Mayor noted the loss of 7000 San Franciscans to AIDS, and his commitment to lobby the U.S. Congress for full funding of the Ryan White Care Act. He noted in a speech on San Francisco and his Matrix program that General Assistance reform was a critical component to the success of Matrix. Another speech recalled the tragedy of the 101 California shooting, and called for passage of the national Brady Bill.
