During processing, the entire collection was re-foldered and re-housed in acid-free folders and boxes. Some metal staples remain. Some documents on acidic or thermal paper were photocopied onto acid-free paper. Other documents on acidic paper were kept in their original state and separated with acid-free paper. Scrapbooks were housed in either acid-free
In 1851, the Common Council passed the first Free School Ordinance, which allowed for the levying of taxes, divided the city into seven school districts, and established a free public school in each district and the annual election of a school board. The first school board under this organization hired Thomas J. Nevins as Superintendent of the Free Common Schools of the city. Happy Valley (later named Denman Grammar) was the first public school to open under this organization, immediately followed by the Powell Street School and Washington Grammar School. The following schools were organized in 1852: Rincon School, Spring Valley Grammar School, Union Grammar School, Mission Grammar School, and Clark's Point Grammar School (later named Garfield Primary). A number of private schools also continued to operate. An 1852 census indicated there were 2,050 school-age children in San Francisco.

Known first as the Department of Common Schools, the department later became known as San Francisco Public Schools, the Department of Education, and the San Francisco Unified School District, its current name. The district is run by a superintendent hired by the Board of Education, an elected body of policy makers. In 1853, the State Legislature passed an act making Catholic or "ward" schools part of the public school system. The act was subsequently repealed in 1855, in an effort to separate church and state schools. However, ward schools were merged into the city's public schools.

The first high school began in 1856 as Union Grammar School with 80 advanced pupils, both boys and girls. It was declared a permanent high school in January, 1858, and named San Francisco High School; the first class of 11 students graduated in December, 1859. The sexes were separated in 1864, with the girls transferring to Girls High School at the corner of Bush and Stockton streets, and the boys remaining at the newly-renamed Boys High School on Powell Street. Girls were allowed "to take a Classical course of study" at Boys High in 1888. The name was changed to Lowell High School in 1894, a coeducational school. Evening school was established in 1856 to accommodate youth who worked during the day. In 1864, the student population included those over 18 years of age. Other special classes and schools established over the years included the Oral School for the Deaf (in 1901), conservation of vision classes, Sunshine School (for physically disabled students), Health School and open air classes, hospital classes, speech correction classes, and adult English classes. "Part-time school" became known as continuation school in 1929.

A form of foreign language instruction began as early as 1864, with classical study in Latin and German offered at Boys High School. In 1878, Superintendent A.L. Mann said that Spanish-language instruction was more valuable than French or German. Spanish instruction began in evening classes two years later, and the board passed a resolution in 1908 allowing for Spanish to be taught in high schools, alongside French and German.

In addition to foreign language instruction, the U.S. Supreme court ruled (in Lau v. Nichols, 1974) that the school district must provide bilingual education to non-English-speaking or limited-English proficient students. However, in 1998, California voters abolished bilingual education with passage of Proposition 227.

In 1852, the male teachers established the Teachers Institute to improve knowledge and the art of teaching. The school department ran a Normal School for teachers, initially consisting of weekly meetings, with the first class graduating in 1861. Other early professional organizations included the Teachers' Mutual Aid Society, organized in 1873, the Principals' Association of San Francisco (formed in 1888), and the San Francisco Teachers Club, organized in 1893. As the city grew, the number of teachers increased, and a number of teachers' councils were formed. In 1911, the Kate Kennedy School Women's Club was organized to further female teachers' rights including salary equity. The club was merged with other teachers' organizations into the Teachers' Association of San Francisco in 1917. This organization immediately became active in municipal and state movements affecting schools, children, and teachers. The same year, the Classroom Teachers' Association was also formed. The San Francisco Federation of Teachers, No. 61, was chartered by the American Federation of Teachers in 1919. In 1989, the SF Federation of Teachers merged with the SF Classroom Teachers Association, a chapter of the National Education Association, to form the United Educators of San Francisco.
In 1878, the first free kindergarten west of the Rocky Mountains was established at 64 Silver Street in San Francisco. Pioneered by Kate Douglas Wiggin, kindergartens were adopted by the school board in 1880.

The fire following the 1906 earthquake destroyed 31 school buildings. Public school children and citizens from around the country raised $30,157.15 towards the construction of a school building. Yerba Buena School was dedicated on May 23, 1909 utilizing these funds. The contents of the cornerstone were revealed during construction in 1922 and are included in this collection.

Vocational education classes were first offered at Humboldt Evening High School in 1896. In 1936, the Samuel Gompers Trade School opened its doors, providing vocational and academic courses, pre-employment courses, and apprenticeship training. The adult and vocational division was organized in 1945; it transferred to the newly created Junior College district in 1969.

By the end of the nineteenth century, larger numbers of Japanese children were attending the city's public schools, presenting the "Japanese question." Following the earthquake and fire of 1906, the school department renamed the Chinese Primary School as the Oriental Public School, and directed all Chinese, Japanese, and Korean children to the school. This set an international crisis in motion, with President Theodore Roosevelt intervening. The segregation order against Japanese students only was lifted in 1907, and the federal government promised to restrict Japanese immigration, leading to the Gentlemen's Agreement of 1908 with Japan.

In 1954, the Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka, KS lawsuit outlawed separate-but-equal schools. Efforts to end de facto segregation in San Francisco included the start of busing in 1971. In 1978, African Americans sought to desegregate the district and improve the quality of education in San Francisco NAACP v. SFUSD. The resulting consent decree, approved in 1983, mandated the desegregation of all schools, programs, and classrooms, and stated that no school could have more than 40 percent of one ethnicity. Reconstitution, or the practice of bringing in new staff at low-performing schools, was promoted to improve academic achievement. In 1987, the racial cap was raised to 45%. In 1999, a group of Chinese parents successfully challenged the school district in a lawsuit over the racial cap (in Ho v. SFUSD), ending the use of race in assigning students. As a result, in 2002, the district instituted a "diversity index" which assigned students based on socio-economic factors. After two years under the diversity index, parents continued to be dissatisfied with having their children placed in cross-town schools.

Scope and Contents
This collection documents the San Francisco Unified School District's history through materials collected by the Teachers Professional Library beginning in 1854, the fourth year of the Department of Common Schools, as it was then known. While there are materials from the early years of the district, the bulk of the collection is from 1874 to 1978. Major areas include administrative documents, curriculum titles, reports produced by the school district, and newspaper clippings. Materials include administrative circulars, photographs, scrapbooks, books, pamphlets, newsletters, district directories, handbooks, budget documents, salary surveys and schedules, maps, and newspaper articles. Yearbooks have been transferred to the library's book collection and can be located through the online catalog. Some of the oldest materials are circulars from the superintendent to staff (1874-1929), an 1867 diploma for a member of the first class of Union Grammar School, an 1879 diploma for a member of the first class of Rincon Grammar School, pamphlets on education (known as "Scraps.") 1854-1924, in Reports and Publications), courses of study (1876-1915, in Curriculum Titles), and an 1884-1885 class register. The most recent items are a graduation program, yearbook, and class photograph from the last graduating class of Benjamin Franklin Middle School in 2005.

The circulars, annual reports, weekly and monthly bulletins, board rules and administrative regulations, and reports and publications provide a variety of information documenting the school district's history, issues, and policies from 1862 to 1980. Annual reports, weekly bulletins, and board rules and regulations were transferred to the library's book collection; see Appendix B. There are extensive newspaper clippings from 1906-1986, as well as a good number of curriculum titles from 1876-1979 (bulk 1927-1978). The earliest budget documents are from 1907. The collection includes the contents of cornerstone for Bay View School, laid March 8, 1908, and Yerba Buena School, laid May 23, 1909. Also included is Emmy Lou Packard's artwork for a third grade social studies series (in Curriculum Titles). Photographs mainly cover the years 1930 to 1977.

Major subjects include integration, buildings and grounds, counseling and guidance, disadvantaged groups, finances, rules and regulations, salaries, and vocational education. A few audio/visual materials are included (in the Curriculum Titles sub-series). A list of superintendents with years of employment is in Appendix C.

Board meeting minutes are not included, other than items from minutes from 1927 to 1928. (The school district maintains board meeting minutes from 1908 to present.) The collection does not include building blueprints, personnel records, or student records.

Physical Description: 12.64 cubic feet

Scope and Contents

This series contains administrative documents. Of special interest are the administrative circulars (1874-1929) issued separately by the superintendent and the board. Newspaper articles on superintendents (mainly 1964-1999) are found in Series 7: Press Clippings.

Subseries A Superintendent of Schools, 1874-1970 1874-1933

Physical Description: 8.67 cubic feet

Scope and Contents

Annual reports on the department's financial condition and accomplishments were submitted by the Superintendent to the Board. These bound volumes, from 1862 to 1937 and 1956 to 1967, have the call number 379.794 Sa52r. The 1862 report includes a school census, a school list, finances, teacher salaries, attendance, a list of graduates, and recommendations. The 1864 report has remarks on separation of the sexes, opposed by the superintendent, and bible instruction, supported by the superintendent. (Separate high schools for boys and girls were instituted that year.) Annual reports also include courses of study, examinations, property acquisitions, erection of new buildings, lists of teachers, principals and Board members, speeches, historical sketches, and lists of where teachers trained and their certification dates.

Beginning in 1930, the superintendent's office published weekly bulletins on professional subjects for teachers and department heads. The bulletins are bound into volumes by school year. The San Francisco Public Schools Bulletin, also known as Superintendent's Bulletin, was continued in 1967 by the San Francisco Unified School District Newsletter, also known as the District Newsletter. The weekly bulletins and newsletters (95 volumes removed to the book collection) cover the years 1930 to 1977 and have the call number 379.794 Sa52sa v.1-37 and 39-48. See Series 8: Photographs for photographs from these publications.

Arrangement

This subseries is further organized into four parts: Part 1: Circulars and Bulletins; Part 2: Monthly Bulletins; Part 3: Special Reports; and Part 4: Speeches and Appointments. The circulars, along with the superintendents' annual reports and weekly and monthly bulletins, provide good documentation of the school department from 1862 to 1977. Newspaper articles on superintendents are found in Series 7: Press Clippings. See Series 8: Photographs for pictures of superintendents. Parts are arranged mostly chronologically.
Part 1 Circulars and Bulletins, 1874-1957 1874-1929

Physical Description: 7.6 cubic feet

Scope and Contents

Superintendents' circulars of memoranda (mostly printed) to staff include circulars issued by the Board. These are glued into scrapbooks, with a few duplicates in folders. Due to the fragility as well as format of the scrapbooks, some of these items may not be photocopied. Sample topics include rules and regulations, annual examinations, courses of study, supplies, vaccinations, holidays, lectures, and an essay contest offered by the Women's Christian Temperance Union on "Twin Evils, Intemperance and Tobacco," with cash prizes (July 20, 1881, circular no. 68). These scrapbooks are a good source of documents issued from 1874 to 1929. Circulars were later known as Bulletins.

Board circulars cover policies such as participation in censuses and school closures. Board memoranda on staff assignments are also found here. A May 13, 1896 circular instructs staff that "it is the desire of the Board of Education that Chinese and Japanese be not employed in or about the school buildings."

Series 5 Instructional Materials, 1876-1983 (bulk 1927-1978)

Physical Description: 18.5 cubic feet

Scope and Contents
This series mostly contains materials published by the school district's Division of Instructional Materials between 1924 and 1978. Formerly known as the Bureau of Instructional Materials, the department was later named Curriculum, Instruction and Professional Development and is currently called the Chief Academic Office. The series is comprised of courses of study (beginning in 1876 and later known as curriculum bulletins) and curriculum titles, which make up the bulk of the series; published studies on the curriculum; newsletters; and Teachers Professional Library guides. Subseries A: Curriculum Titles includes bulletins for adult courses and students who are mentally retarded; along with a study of San Francisco for third graders that includes booklets and filmstrips, as well as artwork for the booklets by artist Emmy Lou Packard. Curriculum Reports document curriculum development and revision beginning in 1935. Subseries D: Teachers' Professional Library has a 1902 catalog of library books.

In the 1920s, formulation of the Seven Cardinal Principles of Education led to an examination of subject matter. A 1925 revision notably included curriculum for junior high school students. Curriculum revision was undertaken again in 1943, 1960, and 1978.

Arrangement
Arranged in four subseries: Subseries A: Curriculum Titles; Subseries B: Curriculum Reports; Subseries C: Curriculum Newsletters; and Subseries D: Teachers Professional Library.

Scope and Contents
This series contains reports and publications, mostly published by the school district, and some dissertations. Considerable focus is given to the topics of integration (1962-1976), vocational/occupational education (1913-1974), buildings and grounds (1902-1982), counseling and guidance (1941-1973), and disadvantaged groups (1917-1996). Other topics include athletics (1948-1965), bilingual education (1968-1982), and San Francisco schools.
Research bulletins produced from 1930-1957 largely cover testing and evaluation of achievement. Also included is a set of "Scraps," bound volumes of early education-related pamphlets (mostly 1860s-1870s).

Arrangement
Arranged in two alphabetically by topic, then chronologically.

Finding Aid to the San Francisco Unified School District Records 1854-2005 (bulk...

Scope and Contents

This series consists largely of oversized scrapbooks of newspaper clippings on the school district, board, and schools. A few have a particular focus; for example, two 1906-1907 volumes largely cover the "Japanese Question," or exclusion of people of "Mongolian" birth from California and the schools. Another 1906 volume focuses on school reconstruction after the earthquake and fire. (In this scrapbook, news clips are pasted into an 1895 ledger belonging to a Thomas Larkin.) There are also two volumes on the 1912 recall of Berkeley Superintendent of Schools, Frank F. Bunker, and one on the California Teachers Association. Another scrapbook, likely created by a parent, covers (Mission) high school football and Navy Operating Base football. Due to the size and format of the scrapbooks, these items may not be photocopied. Additionally, some magazine and newspaper clippings are in folders, organized alphabetically by subject, then chronologically. These loose clippings focus on board members in the 1980s, and individual superintendents of the 1970s through the 1990s.
