Organizational History
In 1857 the San Francisco Board of Education established Minns' Evening Normal School for current and prospective teachers in the city. Named after its principal, George W. Minns, the institution was formally established as the first California State Normal School by the State Legislature in 1862. A decade later, the Legislature voted to move the Normal School to San José, and the school relocated to its new home on Washington Square prior to the fall term of 1872. After a fire destroyed the Normal School building in 1880, the Legislature authorized $200,000 to construct a new building on the same site. Completed in 1881, the building was commonly referred to as the Second State Normal School. After several names and curriculum changes, Minns' Normal School is now San José State University, offering more than 134 bachelor's and master's degrees with 110 concentrations, and is recognized as one of the top public universities granting such degrees in the West.

Centered in the heart of San José and Silicon Valley, San José State University's College of Business has been serving the business educational needs of the local community and the global marketplace since 1928. Initially known as the School of Business, undergraduate and graduate programs at the College are accredited by AACSB International. Less than 5% of business programs worldwide have earned this distinguished hallmark of excellence in business education. AACSB standards relate to curriculum, faculty resources, admissions, degree requirements, computer facilities, financial resources and intellectual climate. The College of Business is also accredited by the Western Association of Schools and Colleges and the California State Board of Education. In addition, the university's Donald and Sally Lucas Graduate School of Business is home to seven graduate programs offered by the College: four Masters of Business Administration, a Master of Science in Accountancy, a Master of Science in Taxation, and a Master of Science in Transportation Management.
