History of Organization

The Western Association of Women Historians (WAWH) is an organization of women historians and independent scholars founded in 1969 to "promote the interests of women historians both in academic settings and in the field of history generally." The organization was founded by academic historians Grace Larsen (President, 1969) and Linda Kerber (Secretary, 1969.) Known as the West Coast History Association from 1969-1972, the organization brought together women historians in colleges and universities to share scholarship and develop professional networking in a casual environment.

The organization changed its name in 1972 to the West Coast Association of Women Historians (WCWHAH). And in 1980 the organization became the Western Association of Women Historians (WAWH) Drawing scholars from the Western states, the WAWH is the largest of the regional women's historical associations in the U.S. In addition to academic historians, WAWH also welcomes literary scholars, art, theater, and film specialists. Along with promoting scholarship and networking of women historians, WAWA activities include improving employment and scholarly opportunities for women historians, enhancing the study of women in mainstream history, and exploring new teaching skills.

This collection also features a sub-series on Dr. Frances Richardson Keller who was actively involved in multiple historical organizations in addition to WAWH. Dr. Keller received her PhD from the University of Chicago focusing on Women in American History. While teaching at San Jose State University, Dr. Keller held multiple organizational positions throughout her career such as served as President of WAWH from 1981-1983 and President of CCWHP during the mid 1980s.

Arrangement note

This collection is arranged into 7 series.

Scope and Contents note

WAHA has amassed a collection of minutes of Executive Board meetings and Business meetings, written and electronic communications of Executive Board Committee members, communications of Award and Prize Committee members, program reports, programs of Annual Conferences, newsletters, reels, and artifacts related to the organization. Given the duration of the organizations' history some communications are missing. Some of the correspondence includes that of past WAWH presidents: Barbara Kanner, Karen Offen, Marguerite Renner, and Nupur Chaudhuri. There are multiple copies of some materials. Updates to the collection will be submitted to CSUS Special Collections and University Archives annually.
