Immediate Source of Acquisition
In support of the Tradeswomen Archives project at California State University Dominguez Hills (CSUDH) initiated by Dr. Vivian Price, Lynn Judith Shaw donated materials in 2008-2010 that document her academic and professional work concerning labor and women in trades.

Biographical / Historical
Lynn Judith Shaw, who is currently a professor of electrical technology at Long Beach City College, has been an advocate for women working in careers that pay a living wage since the mid-1970s. She has worked as miner, steelworker, longshore worker, and journey-level electrician, and has been an active union member of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW) since 1982. She received her Doctorate in Educational Policy from the Claremont Graduate University and San Diego State University in 2001, and her Master's degree at California State University-Long Beach in 1995. Her vocational and research interests include issues of women in nontraditional careers; the development of educational and apprenticeship programs that support the entry of women in skilled trades; bringing to the fore the voices of diverse women and men who work in the trades; and the study of gender, race, class, and work.

Along with her teaching, Dr. Shaw has played a key role in many organizations devoted to women in nontraditional jobs. She is the founder of WINTER, Women In Non Traditional Employment Roles, a nonprofit advocacy and training organization, and of the Long Beach City College Soroptimist Women in Trades and Technology Center. Her work also includes networking, training, and founding or holding leadership roles in other organizations, including the national tradeswomen group, Tradeswomen Now and Tomorrow; the Southern California Tradeswomen Network; Electric Women; and the Redlands-San Bernardino Chapter of the National Organization for Women. Dr. Shaw is also a visual artist who in 1992 co-produced with Vivian Price and Neshtey Crudup the film In My Own Words: Against All Odds, 1992. With these activities, Dr. Shaw has sought to promote increased opportunities for women to enter the skilled trades. Her work has also aimed to increase awareness of gender and racial discrimination in the workplace and in education, as well as of legal and educational means to foster equal opportunity in these areas.

Scope and Contents

The papers comprising the Lynn Shaw collection (1937-2010, bulk 1990-2005) document her career as an advocate for women's rights and career opportunity in the skilled trades, an occupational area traditionally filled by men.

The collection comprises primarily curricular and educational resources; conference and workshop materials; reports; newspaper clippings; information about organizations; publications; and business and legal documents that concern women in trades or that show Dr. Shaw's affiliations with and contributions to various tradeswomen organizations. These materials also reflect her active advocacy and work to foster awareness of gender-related issues in the workplace, in career training, and in the educational system. Organizational papers primarily document the activities of trades organizations such as WINTER and Electric Women, and publications and clippings provide a broad view of policy, related issues, current events, and advocacy concerning women in nontraditional careers. Some of the materials in the collection refer to Dr. Shaw as Lynn Dabney.

The career development series gathers publications; flyers and brochures; correspondence; articles; and reports organized into subseries covering the topics of apprenticeship; conferences and workshops; flyers and brochures, guides and handbooks; curriculum and lesson planning; and programs.

The subject files gather publications, pamphlets, articles, and newspapers clippings covering several topics including: activism and civic events; affirmative action; arts; community development; employment and barriers to employment such as childcare and transportation issues; equality and equal opportunity; gender, especially as it relates to education, employment, and the workplace; industries; labor and labor unions; racism; sexual harassment; tradeswomen; and welfare. The materials in the collection document the landscape of groups and networks that have worked and are working to address issues of women in the skilled trades.

Scope and Contents

The series consists mostly of Dr. Shaw's Master of Arts Thesis, "Women Union Electricians: A Comparison of Job and Training Experiences of White Women and Women of Color" (two copies, California State University-Long Beach, 1995). The series also contains several short pieces: two newsletter articles written by Dr. Shaw on women and nontraditional work (one with the byline Lynn Dabney); an abstract of Dr. Shaw's doctoral dissertation, "Diverse Working Class Women in Skilled Trades Occupations: An Apprenticeship Model for Success" (The Claremont Graduate University and San Diego State University, 2001); a PowerPoint presentation delivered to high school students; and a script for a 1984 radio show, KUCR's "What's Left" program, on which Lynn Dabney was a guest (the script does not reproduce her words but does include the hosts' introduction of her). The series also includes a booklet that Dr. Shaw produced for a class at San Diego State University, extensive bibliographical references, and a small amount of miscellaneous notes and correspondence.

Scope and Contents
This series consists of items collected by Lynn Shaw that document her affiliation and work with tradeswomen organizations located primarily, though not exclusively, in California. This series includes administrative files, minutes from meetings, personal and organizational notes, general information about organizations, correspondence, and ephemera. The first sequence (Folders 2:1-2:13) focuses on organizations with whom Dr. Shaw was or has been directly involved, including WINTER, which she founded; Tradeswomen Now and Tomorrow, a national coalition of tradeswomen's advocates for which she serves as a board member; the Southern California Tradeswomen Network, which Dr. Shaw incorporated in 1993; Electric Women, a support group for women electricians that began in 1984 and continued meeting until 2004; and the Redlands-San Bernardino Chapter of the National Organization for Women, for which Dr. Shaw served as co-coordinator in the mid-1980s. The second sequence (Folders 2:14-2:32) includes organizations Dr. Shaw has either supported or found relevant; this sequence is arranged alphabetically by name of organization. The materials in this series reflect women's advocacy and work to organize, educate, and support themselves in their pursuit of skilled trades and nontraditional occupations. For example, in 1995, WINTER grew out of the Century Women's Employment Project, and Dr. Shaw was directly involved in developing the organization's founding principles; the organization has since served as an advocacy and support group for women interested in nontraditional careers and skilled trades. For more information on the activities of various organizations represented in this series, see other series in this collection, including especially Series III, Tradeswomen and Related Publications; and Series V, Career Development and the Trades, Subseries B, Conferences and Workshops, and Subseries D, Curriculum and Lesson Planning

Scope and Contents
This subseries gathers curricular materials developed to foster awareness of nontraditional career opportunities for women and to support career entry and retention. The bulk of these materials were developed and delivered during the 1990s and early 2000s. The materials include curriculum guides; materials concerning roles such as mentor and peer advocate; and lesson plans developed for learners in a variety of settings, including four-year and community colleges, secondary schools, and adult and vocational education programs. Some of these resources include information about curricular program development. Examples include the Los Angeles Unified School District, Commission for Gender Equity’s “The Non Traditional Puzzle: Start Your Own Program for Women and Women Unlimited: How to Establish and Run a Non-Traditional Training Program for Women. Draft of a Work-in-Progress” (Folder 8:26). This subseries includes materials developed by WINTER, such as “New Visions”: The WINTER Week. Women in Non Traditional Employment Roles. Subseries E: Programs 1983-2008 1993-2005

Physical Description: (1.63 linear feet) 2.2 boxes

Language of Material: English

Scope and Contents

This subseries includes materials on career development programs both in California and throughout the United States. The bulk of this subseries concerns Long Beach City College programs, especially its career certificate program, information on grants (including Dr. Shaw's application for the Women in Trades and Technology Education Program and other grants and proposals proposed or headed by Dr. Shaw), and meeting minutes; the Nontraditional Employment for Women (NEW) Act and related programs; the Nontraditional Employment for Women "Choosing Your Own Path" program (Private Industry Council of Long Beach); and other assorted programs from California. Other programs include those of tradeswomen groups such as Chicago Women in Trades, Oregon Tradeswomen, and Wider Opportunities for Women (WOW). The subseries also includes directories, news clippings, flyers, and brochures from organizations across the United States and in California; these materials are in folders at the beginning of the subseries. Materials for organizations are arranged in alphabetical order by name of organization; these begin with Box 9 (Folder 9:6) and continue through Box 11 (Folder 11:34).
