Biographical/Historical Note
Edouard Léon Théodore Mesens (born in Brussels, 1903 November 27) is probably best known for his ardent support and promotion of surrealist art, particularly artists in the Surrealist movements in Belgium and England. In his capacity as a gallery director, curator, collector and publisher, Mesens mounted significant exhibits in both countries, bought and sold works by little-known artists, introduced artists to other dealers, and published the work of writers and artists. His favorite artist was Magritte, whose work Mesens championed as early as 1920 when they met at an exhibit. Despite their difficult relationship, Mesens promoted Magritte consistently and amassed a large collection of his work.

In the early 1920s Mesens became the assistant to the art dealer Louis Manteau in Brussels. In 1926, after his military service, Mesens worked briefly for the Galerie La Vierge Poupine. In 1927 Paul-Gustave van Hecke (who also edited Variétés) hired Mesens to be the assistant director at the Galerie L'Epoque. (Mesens had introduced Magritte to van Hecke in 1920.) Mesens opened his own, eponymous, gallery in 1930, but it lasted only a few months until 1931 when he was appointed secretary for the Palais de Beaux-Arts in Brussels, a vital center for art in Brussels at this time. While at the Palais he organized the exhibition Minotaure in 1934, and worked with the English artist Roland Penrose to organize the International Exhibition of Surrealism in 1936. Shortly after this experience Mesens moved to London in 1938 to direct the London Gallery and publish the London Bulletin. The gallery closed at the start of World War II; during the war Mesens worked in London for Radio Belgique.

Mesens studied music as a child, and up through the 1920s composed many pieces, setting the poems of Philippe Soupault, Benjamin Péret, Tristan Tzara and Paul Eluard to music. Several of his compositions were performed in Europe. Around 1923 Mesens dedicated himself to poetry and art. During the 1920s he was an editor of the avant-garde magazines, Sélection (published in Antwerp) and Variétés (published in Brussels). He published and edited the magazines Oesophage (1925), Marie (1926), Bulletin International du Surrealisme, 3 (1935), the London Bulletin (1938-1940), and Message from Nowhere (1944). In 1933 Mesens founded editions Nicolas Flamel, which published books of the early surrealists, including some of his own. His own published work includes 3 books of poetry: Femme complete, 1933; Alphabet sourd-aveugle (a collaboration with Paul Eluard), 1933; Troisiéme front, 1944) and one collection, Poèmes 1923-1958, published 1959 with illustrations by Magritte. Mesens also wrote many reviews and published translations of Paul Eluard (with Roland Penrose).

His own art work, primarily collages, was exhibited in the Venice Biennal, at the Galerie Furstenberg in 1957 (his first one-man exhibit), the Palais de Beaux-Arts in Brussels 1959, the Galleria del Naviglio par Carlo Cardazzo in Milan in 1960, London's Grosvenor gallery in 1961, the Alan gallery in New York in 1962. A major exhibit of his collages was held at Knokke-Le-Zoute in 1963. He continued to exhibit through 1971 until his death in Brussels in that same year.

Processing History
Neil Hathaway began processing and organizing the collection in 1994. Sjoerd Meihousen began writing this finding aid in 1996. Jocelyn Gibbs finalized the organization of the collection and completed this finding aid in 1998. Nearly 100 photographs of art by artists whose work Mesens exhibited or encountered in some way, were moved to this archive from Special Collections accession 97.R.53.

Separated Material
Some of the publications received with the archive have been kept in the collection; most were transferred to the Getty Research Institute Library's general and rare book collection.

Scope and Content of Collection
The papers of E. L. T. Mesens (ca. 12 linear ft.) document his career as a gallery director and curator, editor and publisher, and musician, poet and artist during the period 1917-1971. (A few printed materials date to 1976.) The archive provides a unique view of the Surrealist movement, especially in Belgium and London. Included in the archive are more than 3,000 items of correspondence with artists, writers, dealers and other culturally prominent figures. Ca. 900 photographs of art works illustrate the work carried by Mesens' galleries and shown in exhibits he organized. A dossier documents the International Surrealist Exhibit he and Roland Penrose organized in 1936. A few files contain notes and meeting minutes from the Living Art Gallery and the beginnings of the Institute of Contemporary Art (ICA), both in London. A few small sales books and lists document some of the work carried by his galleries, 1931-1936, as well as works he collected. Unpublished manuscripts sent to him at the London Bulletin (1938-1940) reveal the audience and appeal of the publication among established and relatively unknown surrealist writers and artists. Mesens's own work is presented in musical scores, poetry and prose manuscripts, some printed articles and reviews, and photographs of his collages and paintings. In addition printed ephemera and some single issues of magazines document his, and other artists' exhibitions. Most of the printed journals and catalogues received with the collection have been separated to the Getty Research Library.

Arrangement note

Series I. Correspondence, 1918-1971
Physical Description: 4.5 Linear Feet
Scope and Content Note
Series comprises letters to and from musicians, artists, writers, art dealers, curators, publishers and others, including André Breton, Jan Cokx, Paul Eluard, Enrico Baj, André de Ridder, Tristan Tzara, René Magritte, Paul-Gustave van Hecke, Paul Nougé (Breton's counterpart in Belgium), Robert Giron, Roland Penrose, Herbert Read, Wifredo Lam, Jacques Brunius, Charley Toorop, Alfred Barr, Marcel Mariën, Benjamin Péret, Pierre Matisse, Marcel Leconte, Emile Langui, Huib Hoste, and Yves Tanguy.

The earliest correspondence is mostly with musicians, concerning avant-garde music. From the early 1920s on, the correspondence provides rich details about artists, exhibitions, publications, the purchase and sale of art, and the shifting relationships among artists and within artist groups. Many letters relate to the avant-garde art and literary journals of the period and to the galleries sympathetic to progressive art. They also provide an intimate account of World War II, and describe the political activism (communism, antifascism) of numerous artists and writers.

In the later correspondence (from the 1950s through 1971), Mesens's expertise in surrealism is called upon by curators, scholars and students. Also during this period his own collages and paintings are exhibited with more frequency and this is a subject of many letters.

Series V. Mesens's manuscripts, ca. 1917-1967
Physical Description: ca. 2 lin. ft.
Scope and Content Note Series contains music, poetry and prose manuscripts written by Mesens. Manuscripts of scores composed by Mesens, many set to words written by others, date from 1917-1941, and undated. Some were composed for Radio Belgique, where Mesens worked while in London during World War II. Poetry manuscripts consist of handwritten and typed poems, several in multiple versions, and whole manuscripts for his published collections. Especially well documented are the poems for his books Troisième front, and Poèmes. Other manuscripts are of prose writings: lectures, reviews, appreciations of certain artists and a few miscellaneous journalistic pieces.
