Biographical / Historical Note
Julio Payró began his career as a painter, studying with the Uruguayan artist Joaquín Torres-García in Paris and Barcelona (1907), then with William de Gouve in Brussels from 1912 to 1918, after which he returned to Buenos Aires. In 1928 he decided to work solely as an art critic, building a reputation as a major analyst of 20th century art movements in Argentina and Latin America.

Scope and Content of Collection
The collection comprises 354 letters from 116 correspondents sent to the Argentine art critic Julio Payró between 1937 and 1971. There are 7 letters by Payró: one is a carbon copy, the others are written as answers on the backs of letters received. Two thirds of the correspondents are artists, mostly from Argentina and a few other Southern American countries; some are European-born émigrés to South America. The other third are intellectuals, including art critics and historians, writers, editors, publishers, anthropologists, poets, scholars, journalists, professors, art collectors, sociologists, and the Chilean dancer Ana Itelman.
With rare exceptions, the correspondents are thanking Payró for helping them to get grants for studies in Europe, or financial help to publish their works. Most of them are grateful for Payró’s reviews of their works. The artists write to Payró about their struggles in Paris, their work, their hopes, their exhibitions. The group of 40 letters in this collection related to Payro’s book Veintidos Pintores, published in 1944, documents his dedication to promoting modern art in Argentina.
Among the most significant letters are those from the painter and poet Eduardo Jonquieres (19), the writer Eduardo Mallea (7), Victoria Ocampo, the founder of the Sur review (9), the Uruguayan writer Juan Carlos Onetti (48), the Argentine artist

Jonquieres, Euardo, Paris and Piriápolis, 1959-1971

Physical Description: 19.0 letters

Scope and Content Note
The Argentine painter and author (1918-2000) writes from Paris, where he settled after 1958. The letters from 1959 and early sixties describe his busy life, earning money with illustrations and a job in a printing house, while doing his daily hours as an UNESCO counselor, also writing and painting a lot. In January 1961 he informs Payró that there are 40,000 painters in Paris, of which about 80 are Argentine. Most of the 6 letters from 1962 express Jonquiere's disappointment about current art and politics. That year he writes a book about Roberto Payró, the writer (his friend's father) to be published soon; participates in exhibitions, and abandons his geometrical painting for a totally new style. The seven letters from 1970-1971 were sent from the seaside resort of Piriapolis in Uruguay, between visits to Buenos Aires. His new book, Bestiario, will be published there the following year by the Fondo Nacional de las Artes.

Box 1, Folder 16

Physical Description: 1.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The Argentine painter and author of new art theories (b. 1911) informs Payró that he has sent him all the issues of Perceptismo he had asked for, and would be glad to fully inform both critics and scholars about the goals of non-figurative art.

Box 1, Folder 17  Malanca, José, Córdoba, 1950 Aug 30
Physical Description: 1.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The Argentine painter (1897-1967) invites Payró to the inauguration of his most important exhibition, although he knows that his impressionism cannot interest the critic.

Box 1, Folder 17  Mallea, Eduardo, Buenos Aires, 1941-1970
Physical Description: 8.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
One of the letters is from Payró. The letters speak of Payró's long friendship with an important Argentine author, the writer Eduardo Mallea (1903-1982). In a letter sent in the 40s, when Mallea was an editor at La Nación, he congratulates his friend for the translation of André Lhote's book Traité du paysage. Another is an introduction letter for the Chilean surrealist painter and writer. In 1947 he informs Payró about some of his family portraits by Benjamin Franklin Rawson. In October 1970 Mallea sends an emotional answer to a letter from his lifetime friend, remembering his outstanding qualities and his moral and intellectual generosity. One week later, Payró answers in kind, with his own recollections.

Maria (unidentified), Paris, 1962

Physical Description: 5.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The author of these letters is a close friend of Payró, and very close to the Argentine writer Julio Cortázar, who lives in Paris with his wife, the translator Aurora Bernádez, both mentioned in Maria's letters. She intends to write a play, and an essay about "La Simpatía," but at Payró's suggestion she is writing stories. Maria refers to Payró's answers, but it is not clear if all these letters were written to him. Each letter contains news about Julio Cortázar, whose latest novel, La Rayuela is to be published that year.

Physical Description: 11.0 items
Scope and Content Note
The Argentine author (1890-1979), founder of the important Sur review, was a friend of Payró, a frequent contributor to that publication. Only 3 letters are dated (961, 1969 and 1971); they are a mixture of friendly thoughts and references to current events or publications. Six letters are related to Payró’s contributions to “Sur,” written on letterhead of the review. An undated letter informs him about a lunch offered to Indira Gandhi and her retinue of 25 persons at the San Isidro residence of Ocampo, to which only some writers and musicians will be invited. An invitation for Payró and a business card of Mr. & Mrs. Rajeshwar Dayal are included (undated).

Box 1, Folder 19  Oenslager, Donald, New York, 1950-1960

Physical Description: 4.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The American stage setting designer and author (1902-1975) was introduced to Payró by a letter signed by Henry Allen Moe, on letterhead of the Guggenheim Memorial Foundation, dated Jan. 23, 1950. An undated letter of Oenslager was obviously sent soon after his return from Buenos Aires to New York. He explains to Payró his professional projects, including the settings for several plays for the fall. He mentions that many projects of all kinds are now being delayed because of “our serious situation in Korea.”

Box 2, Folder 1-6  Onetti, Juan Carlos, 1937-1955

Physical Description: 48.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The Uruguayan writer (1909-1994) worked as a journalist in Buenos Aires and Montevideo (where he made a living as a car salesman), and started to write books in 1939. The letters to Payró are a continued diary, which relates almost every event he did from 1937 to the late 40s, and almost everything he thought about, discussing artists and writers like Cézanne, Matisse, Faulkner, Maugham, Kipling, Proust, to name a few. The letters relate his enthusiasms and disillusionments, his hopes and joys, alternating with pain and insecurity drowned in alcohol and tobacco. In 1938 he is scared by the fascist menace and its consequences in Europe and South America, where refugees from Eastern Europe start arriving. In 1941, with Payró’s help, Onetti obtains a permanent position at the Reuter agency in Montevideo. He sends an undated happy letter to his friend in Buenos Aires after the fall of Peron’s dictatorship in 1955. The collection includes a letter from his cousin and second wife, María Julia, from June 1938.

Box 2, Folder 7  Ortiz, Manuel Angeles, 1943 Jan 29

Physical Description: 1.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The Spanish painter (1895-1984, saved by Picasso from a concentration camp in 1939), spent in Argentina his 9-year political exile. He informs Payró with deep regrets that he cannot attend his friend’s celebration ceremony as he must leave town next day.

Box 2, Folder 7  Otta, Francisco, 1951 Nov 5

Physical Description: 1.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The artist (1908-1999, settled in Chile) asks Payró if he could use the help he has promised him for opening an exhibition in Buenos Aires. His previous one in 1942 received very good reviews.
Box 2, Folder 8-9
Pettoruti, Emilio, 1963-1971

Physical Description: 23.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The Argentine painter (1892-1971) continues his uninterrupted correspondence with his friend Payró after he settled in Paris in 1953 (for letters from 1943 to 1957 see Acc. no. 2001.M.18). In 1963 Pettoruti writes about his work, his future exhibition, and the latest national and international politico-cultural gossip. In later years he will grow uneasy with American and European politics. In 1964 he is writing his memoirs to be published in 1966. Two years later he is changing the way he paints, his new works being much smaller. He asks Payró which of his works should remain in Argentina to represent his art. In the letter he sent him the year of his death, Pettoruti confesses that there is no card catalog of his works. His wife died while she was working on it and those papers were never found. A good wishes card of July 6 1961 is illustrated with a reproduction of his collage "Il sifone" from 1915.

Box 2, Folder 10
Pierri, Orlando, Buenos Aires, 1951 Feb 2

Physical Description: 1.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The Argentine artist (1913-1992) informs Payró that he has changed his painting after the second trip to Europe, and would like to know his opinion. Invites him to his studio, and sends a few photos as samples.

Box 2, Folder 10
Piquet, Julio, 1944?

Physical Description: 1.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The editor of La Nación, congratulates Payró for his study about Aduanero Rousseau, written in perfect prose, as a true son of his father.

Box 2, Folder 10
Pronsato, Domingo, Bahía Blanca, 1940 Dec 25

Physical Description: 1.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The Argentine artist (1881-1971) is grateful to Payró for the analysis of his painting published in no. 74 of Sur. He, and the other two critics, Romero Brest and Amador, have come, through different means, to rather similar conclusions, which will guide him in his future work.

Box 2, Folder 10
Rebay, Hilla, New York, 1949?

Physical Description: 2.0 items
Scope and Content Note
The collector and Director of the Guggenheim Foundation sends Payró a hectic letter written in various directions as she added new pieces of information. She is offering him color slides he could use for his lectures about the Foundation's paintings and Kandinsky. She describes the new museum. On the corner of the first page she added a chronology of her collecting. She sends a photograph of herself at her home in Greens Farms, Connecticut is dated Easter 1949.

Box 2, Folder 10
Rebuffo, Victor L., Buenos Aires, 1945, 1951

Physical Description: 2.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The artist (1903-1983) sends Payró six photos of his works, instead of those printed on transparent Japanese paper, which could not have been useful for his purpose. Both letters convey Rebuffo’s congratulations to Payró for honors received.
Box 2, Folder 10  Rinaldini, Julio, Buenos Aires, 1946 Sept 5
Physical Description: 1.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The art critic tells Payró that he needs to further consider their possible collaboration.

Box 2, Folder 10  Rojas Paz, Pablo, Buenos Aires, 1951-1953
Physical Description: 2.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The Argentine writer (1896-1956) sends a long, friendly and ironic letter about himself, his writing, and other writers. The second letter (1953) accuses Payró of some offence related to writers who published in Sur review. Payró wrote his own answer on the back of the letter, denying the allegation.

Box 2, Folder 10  Roman Rojas, Samuel, Santiago, 1950 June 30
Physical Description: 1.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The Chilean sculptor (1907-1990) is happy that Payró intends to write a monograph about him. That would help him continue his work despite his enemies at the University. A letter to the sub-secretary, a friend of Payró, about the book he is planning would also strengthen his economic situation with the Public Administration, now rather shaky.

Box 2, Folder 11  Romero-Brest, Jorge, Buenos Aires, 1969 Sept 23
Physical Description: 1.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The influent Argentine art critic (1905-1989) apologizes for something published in Panorama about Pettoruti which offended Payró.

Box 2, Folder 11  Romero, José Luis, Adrogue, 1968-1969
Physical Description: 3.0 items
Scope and Content Note
The Argentine writer and historian (1909-1977) sends his friend a 2 page letter in verse, a thank you note for information about Scandinavian art, and a letter discussing some conceptual interpretations.

Box 2, Folder 11  Salazar, Toño, Montevideo, 1946 Oct 23
Physical Description: 1.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The Salvadoran caricaturist (1900-1985) thanks Payró for the article he published in Qué about his "esperpentos" (ugly things).

Box 2, Folder 11  Sanchez, Ideal, Tucumán, 1949-1950
Physical Description: 2.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The Argentine painter and engraver informs Payró that he has obtained exhibition space at the Gallery Müller in October. Payro's opinion about his art has made him feel more secure, and he will return to Buenos Aires, then try to go to Europe.

Box 2, Folder 11  Satanowsky, Isidro, Buenos Aires, 1943
Physical Description: 2.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
Julio Payró answers the request of Dr. Satanowsky to advise about the projects submitted by four artists for the mural decoration of the Sociedad Hebraica Argentina building. Dr. Satanovsky respectfully does not agree with his order of choices.

Seoane, Luís, La Coruña (Spain), 1969-1970
Physical Description: 3.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
Three long letters from the Argentine artist (1910-1979) reflect his passionate temperament, his creative energy and his involvement in ethnic and social issues. He keeps Payró informed about his projects in Spain before and after a visit to Argentina and London in 1970. The third letter is mainly his comment about the famous 1969 English movie Alfred the Great.

Box 2, Folder 12
Serrano, Pablo, Montevideo, 1949 Sep 21
Physical Description: 1.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The Spanish sculptor (1908-1985) informs Payró that he is preparing a stone relief for a Montevideo square. On letterhead with initialled drawing.

Shand, William, Buenos Aires, 1948 Aug 13
Physical Description: 1.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The Anglo-Argentine poet and writer (b. 1902) would like Payró to see the ten paintings made by his friend, the Dutch painter Bob Gesinus Visser, during his visit to Buenos Aires on his way to Paris.

Box 2, Folder 12
Sibellino, Antonio Silvestre, Buenos Aires, 1942-1953
Physical Description: 3.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The three letters sent by the Argentine sculptor (1891-1960) to Payró over the years describe his thoughts about art, the gift of those involved in it and the times in which it is created. Thanks Payró for his article about sculpture published in Ars of July 1953, in which he generously gave a privileged place to Manes Curatella and to him.

Box 2, Folder 12
Spilimbergo, Lino Enea, Tucumán, 1949
Physical Description: 2.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The Argentine artist (1896-1964) sent Payró both letters while he was the Director of the Instituto Superior de Artes of the National University in Tucumán. He could not obtain decent compensations for professors, so they cannot benefit from Payró's and another specialist's valuable courses.

Box 2, Folder 12
Svanascini, Osvaldo, Osaka, undated
Physical Description: 1.0 letters
Scope and Content Note

Scope and Content Note
The painter (1913-1986) is grateful to Payró for his homage.

Box 2, Folder 13  Torre Guillermo de, Buenos Aires, 1951 Jul 10, 1951 Jul 25
Physical Description: 2.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
These letters were sent by the writer (1900-1971) to Payró to coordinate the publication of the letters they will each send to Sur to be published in the same issue.

Box 2, Folder 13  Torres García, Joaquín, Montevideo, 1940-1944
Physical Description: 9.0 items
Scope and Content Note
The Uruguayan painter (1874-1949) keeps his friend Payró up to date with his activities, which for him mean painting and teaching. In 1940 he has happily adopted constructivism, which has led him to "cosas originalísimas." In 1943 he has opened a 200 painting exhibition of his disciples' work. In 1944 he enjoys the most relevant successes: the Premio de Honor at the Salon, and an "homenaje" at the University for his 50 years of work "in and for" painting, his studio and his school. Payró is invited to give a speech (a letter from the Comisión Organizadora del Homenaje is included). In November 1944 the artist is ready to fight the enemies of constructivism, as half a million pesos allocated for school mural decoration is at stake. But he and his wife have been sick, and he is exhausted: "Julio, ya no puedo más - estoy enfermo y cansado de todo."(Nov. 3, 1944).

Box 2, Folder 14  Ucar, Emilio, Montevideo, 1949, 1951
Physical Description: 2.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The Uruguayan writer and editor (1910-1984) sends a 4 page letter of analysis of Payró's writings. The second letter expresses his gratitude for the text about French painters Payró sent to be published in their new review Resalto, and another text to come from Guillermo de Torre.

Box 2, Folder 14  Uriarte, Carlos Enrique, Rosario, 1948 July 18
Physical Description: 1.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The painting professor at Bellas Artes school in Rosario thanks Payró for his lectures and for all he learned from their conversation.

Box 2, Folder 14  Urruchúa, Demetrio, Buenos Aires, 1945 May 10
Physical Description: 1.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The painter and muralist (1902-1978) informs Payró that he has no photos of his works, and gives him a long list of museums and persons in the United States who could provide them at his request. He won't spend time on that, because he is not interested in critics, and does not believe that their words could have any impact on the fate of artists' creation.

Box 2, Folder 14  Valmaggia, Juan, Buenos Aires, 1948 Sept 15
Physical Description: 1.0 letters
Scope and Content Note
The editor of La Nación thanks Payró for the generous words written to him when he was in a difficult professional situation.

<td>The book by Julio E. Payró was published in Buenos Aires, Editorial Poseidón, Dec 1944. The file includes the template of the letter sent by Payró on June 1 1944 to the 22 artists he intended to present in the book, asking for their consent and specifying the necessary biographical information and reproductions of works to be published in the book. Each participant will receive a free copy of the book. There are 40 letters received: 18 of acceptance, dated from June 1944, and 13 of thanks for the book received in December. The other 9 letters are from artists complaining about difficulties in obtaining reproductions of their best works. Unrelated letters from ten artists included in the book have been described in the inventory under their names. The 20 artists included in this book correspondence are: Aquiles Badi, J.A.
