Biography
Tomas Fabregas, a Spanish citizen, traveled to the United States in 1979. Fascinated by New York, he became a legal permanent resident. Fabregas worked for the United Nations in New York prior to moving to California in order to pursue graduate work at UC Berkeley. When he was diagnosed as HIV positive in 1989, Fabregas put his career on hold to become an AIDS activist. He began his involvement with the San Francisco AIDS Foundation in 1989 by volunteering for the Foundation's Public Policy Department.
He continued his work with the San Francisco AIDS Foundation in 1990, helping to create a multilingual newsletter for HIV positive people on behalf of the Foundation's Education Department as well as being elected to the San Francisco AIDS Foundation's board of Directors and the Healing Alternatives Foundation's Board of Directors. Additionally, Fabregas became a member of ACT UP Golden Gate and ACT UP San Francisco in 1990. Fabregas worked with ACT UP on the Treatment Issues Committee as well as the Joint Immigration Working Group of ACT UP San Francisco and ACT UP Golden Gate.
In his capacities at the San Francisco AIDS Foundation and the ACT UP Immigration Working Group, Fabregas campaigned to have immigration and travel restrictions on HIV positive people lifted worldwide. In the United States, Fabregas campaigned against the Nickles amendment, a piece of U.S. legislation which retained the exclusion of HIV positive immigrants and travelers. Fabregas also campaigned both the Bush senior and Clinton administrations to release the HIV positive Haitian refugees quarantined at Guantanamo Bay.

Fabregas traveled to AIDS conferences worldwide, often as a keynote speaker. He was instrumental in urging the 8th International AIDS Conference to move the conference location from Boston due to U.S. immigration and travel restrictions on HIV positive people. The 8th International AIDS conference was held in Amsterdam in 1992, featuring Fabregas as a speaker at the opening ceremony. Jeffrey Brooks, Fabregas' partner, often traveled overseas with him.

Scope and Content of Collection

Memos, press releases, articles, correspondence, conference information, and reports, 1990-1994 (3.6 linear feet) chronicle the AIDS activism of Tomas Fabregas. The collection focuses on his capacities with the San Francisco AIDS Foundation and the Joint Immigration Working Group of ACT UP San Francisco and ACT UP Golden Gate as well as his outreach to related organizations. Fabregas campaigned against immigration and travel restrictions on HIV positive people. The collection contains articles and speeches written by Fabregas in addition to particular campaigns that he worked on.

The collection is divided into 9 series:

- Series 2. SAN FRANCISCO AIDS FOUNDATION, 1991-1993
- Series 5. INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON AIDS, 1991-1993

Each folder is listed within the appropriate series in the container list. Folders containing memos or correspondence are arranged chronologically in ascending order.

This series includes articles, flyers, memos and correspondence for the ACT UP Immigrant Working Group of ACT UP San Francisco and ACT UP Golden Gate. Also included is information from other ACT UP chapters.

This series includes memos, press releases, articles, and correspondence from the San Francisco AIDS Foundation. Fabregas began his work with the San Francisco AIDS Foundation in 1991 and resigned from the Foundation in 1993.

This series includes AIDS related information from organizations Fabregas was in contact with. In his capacities at the San Francisco AIDS Foundation as well as the ACT UP Immigrant Working Group, Fabregas worked extensively with the Coalition for Immigrant Services (CIRRS) and the Lawyer's Committee for Civil Rights. Fabregas also worked with the American Foundation for AIDS Research (AMFAR), an AIDS activist organization founded by Elizabeth Taylor. Photos of Taylor and Fabregas together at press conferences are included in the AMFAR folder.

Series 4. HIV Restrictions on Immigration, 1993

This series includes memos, notes, correspondence, legal documents, flyers and press releases dealing the Nickles amendment, a National Institute of Health (NIH) bill, detainment of HIV positive Haitian refugees at Guantanamo Bay. The Nickles amendment and the NIH bill were attempts to legislate the exclusion of HIV immigrants, rather than leaving immigrant restrictions under the advisement of the Secretary of Health and Human Services. The HIV restrictions on immigration were called into question when the United States detained over 200 HIV positive Haitian refugees at Guantanamo Bay in 1991.

This series includes information on the 7th, 8th, 9th, and 10th International Conference on AIDS. There is extensive documentation on the 8th conference, which Fabregas campaigned to have moved from Boston due to U.S. immigration restrictions.
restrictions. Once the conference was moved to Amsterdam, Fabregas campaigned to have the issue of HIV immigration and travel restrictions addressed at the opening ceremony. After petitioning the conference committee, Fabregas was eventually invited to speak about immigration and travel restrictions at the opening ceremony of the 8th International Conference on AIDS. At the conference, Fabregas publicly challenged the Bush administration to enforce the HIV restrictions on his re-entry into the United States. Fabregas re-entered the U.S. without any issues. The mayor of San Francisco proclaimed Fabregas' return to the U.S. as Tomas Fabregas Day

This folder contains the personal correspondence of Tomas Fabregas. It also contains Fabregas' Correspondence with his lawyer, Morris Ratner.

This series includes notes, research, awards, articles, speeches, and reports written for or about Fabregas.

This series includes miscellaneous activities and conferences attended by Fabregas.

This series includes AIDS activist business cards from around the world and the Immigration Working Group rubber stamp.
