Scope and Contents note
The collection contains biographies, memoirs, investigation records, confessions, and judicial testimony and decrees, relating to political dissidence and to prosecutions for political offenses in China from the 1950s to the 1970s, collected from various sources in China. It also features internal party documents from key political campaigns and individual case files and dossiers from the early 1950s to the final years of the Mao era.
Although the collection is called the Communist Chinese Political Movement Collection, the word yundong (movement), which once occupied a prominent place in the political lexicon of the Chinese Communist Party (CCP), has become archaic in the twenty-first century. Yet the the various movements launched by the CCP served the purposes of maintaining its political legitimacy and the sense that Chinese society was moving toward a brighter future. With every political movement launched at various stages of its rule after 1949, the CCP experienced significant transformation, along with the landscape of Chinese politics, culture, and society.
