Accruals

Materials may have been added to the collection since this finding aid was prepared. To determine if this has occurred, find the collection in Stanford University's online catalog at http://searchworks.stanford.edu/ . Materials have been added to the collection if the number of boxes listed in the online catalog is larger than the number of boxes listed in this finding aid.

Biographical Note

Born in Brooklyn, New York, Inkeles received an A.B. degree in 1941 and an A.M. in 1946 from Cornell University. He received a Ph.D. in 1949 from Columbia University, publishing Public Opinion in Soviet Russia: A Study in Mass Persuasion in 1950.

From 1972 on, Inkeles was a professor of sociology at Stanford University and a senior fellow at the Hoover Institution. Inkeles was an expert on political behavior, modernization, social psychology, and national character. His research focused on the social structure of an emerging worldwide society and cross-national comparative studies. Inkeles published Becoming Modern: Individual Change in Six Developing Countries in 1974 and Exploring Individual Modernity in 1983.

Inkeles has held numerous fellowships including the Center for Advanced Study in Behavioral Sciences in Stanford, California from 1955 to 1956 a Guggenheim fellowship for study in Israel and the United Kingdom from 1977 to 1978, and a National Academy of Sciences fellowship in 1992. He was also a Fulbright scholar in Greece in 1977 and in Chile in 1985.

He was elected to three of the most distinguished honorary societies in America: the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in 1962, the American Philosophical Society in 1972, and the National Academy of Sciences in 1981. Alex Inkeles passed away on July 9, 2010.

Scope and Content of Collection

Preliminary Inventory of the Alex Inkeles papers
The papers consist largely of documentation associated with research projects conducted by Inkeles, a prominent American sociologist, as well as materials pertaining to his teaching career. There are numerous papers and articles written by Inkeles, writings by others, and printed matter relating to sociology and to international geographic studies of locations such as the Soviet Union, China, and India.

A large section of material concerns the Harvard Project on the Socio-Cultural Aspects of Development (later known as the Harvard Project on Social and Cultural Aspects of Development), a large study headed by Inkeles that collected data on the basis of interviews made in Argentina, Chile, India, Israel, Nigeria, and East Pakistan (now Bangladesh). The data was subsequently used as the basis for a 1974 book by Inkeles, Becoming Modern: Individual Change in Six Developing Countries.

A variety of Inkeles' writings include a chronological section of article reprints, various research materials, drafts, papers, and book chapters. Also included are drafts and research data for Inkeles' books Exploring Individual Modernity and the edited volume, Sociology: An Introduction.

The papers also include materials related to Inkeles research projects, including collected background materials, data sets, and draft writings on topics such as "Quality of Life," "National Character," and "Adolescence."

Material on Inkeles' academic teaching career consists of lecture notes and course materials for sociology classes, dissertations and theses written by students, academic administrative material, and documentation on his involvement in organizations such as the Committee on Scholarly Communication with the People's Republic of China.
