Scope and Content of Collection

The William W. Bartley papers contain drafts of the first volume of the collected works of Friedrich A. von Hayek, The Fatal Conceit: The Errors of Socialism and sound recordings of speeches and lectures by F. A. von Hayek and others.

William Warren Bartley was a professor and American philosopher who edited works by Karl Popper and Friedrich A. von Hayek. He was the editor of Hayek's The Fatal Conceit, a book which discusses Hayek's view of socialism, defining the fatal conceit as the idea that "man is able to shape the world according to his wishes" (p. 27). The Fatal Conceit file contains drafts of this work and related correspondence.

The collection contains Sound recordings of economics lectures by Friedrich A. von Hayek, Ronald Coase, Roger Garrison, William Hutt, Israel Kirzner, Murry Rothbard, Gerald O'Driscoll, and other economists.

Physical Description: 50 sound cassettes

Scope and Contents note

Contains 50 compact sound cassettes of economics lectures by F. A. von Hayek, Ronald Coase, Roger Garrison, William Hutt, Israel Kirzner, Murry Rothbard, Gerald O'Driscoll, and others. The majority of cassettes in the collection retain an original numbering system, with cassettes labeled 1 to 21 and 165 to 182, although there are some gaps within this system. Tapes labeled with these numbers are arranged in numerical order, while tapes without numbers are arranged alphabetically by speaker (or by title when the speaker cannot be identified). Titles are inscribed from labels and may not match content.
