Historical Note
The Russian Academy of Science was founded in Saint Petersburg by Peter the Great in 1724. The name varied over the years, becoming the Akademiia Nauk SSSR (the USSR Academy of Science) in 1917.
The national academy of the USSR had a network of scientific research institutes across the Soviet Union, with headquarters in Moscow. The Academy was a civil and self-governed, non-commercial organization chartered by the Government of the USSR, consisting of specialized scientific branches.

The Sibirskoe (Siberian Branch) was established in 1950. After the dissolution of the Soviet Union, by decree of the president of Russia on December 2, 1991, the institute once again became Rossiĭskaia akademiia nauk (The Russian Academy of Science), inheriting all facilities of the USSR Academy of Science in the territory of Russia.

Scope and Content of Collection

The collection relates to the administration of scientific and other academic research in Siberia (Novosibirsk) and elsewhere in the Soviet Union. It consists of 28 bound volumes of regulations, directives, resolutions, protocols, decisions, and correspondence. It includes regulations of the central office of the Akademiia nauk SSSR, the Gosudarstvennyil komitet SSSR po nauke i tekhnike, and the Gosudarstvennyil komitet SSSR po trudu i sotsial'nym voprosam.

The collection is a source of documents to study the form and content of regulations, the nature of procedures, the style of operation, the sociological nature of Soviet bureaucracy, and the history of activities and scientific policy of the USSR Academy of Science between 1967 and 1986.
