With the exception of the series “County records: Grants,” the collection was purchased from James H. Sweeney in September 1945. The series “County records: Grants” was acquired from Talisman Press in August 1979. A box of material was found in 2018 and added as Box 14.

Removed or Separated Material
7 photograph albums received as part of this collection were moved to the Photo Archives and cataloged as photCL 63.

Historical Note
One of the original 27 counties of California, El Dorado County was created in 1850 at the time of statehood with Coloma as the county seat. It is in the Sierra Nevada east of Sacramento, in the heart of the gold mining country. Placerville, which had been known as Hangtown due to the numerous hangings in the town, was incorporated in 1854 and became the county seat in 1857.

The discovery of gold, on the morning of January 24, 1848 by James W. Marshall near Sutter’s sawmill in Coloma, ushered in the era of Gold Rush, dramatically altering the American West. The history of El Dorado County is intricately linked to this momentous event. News of the discovery traveled far and wide, and people all over the country --- and indeed all over the world --- were lured to El Dorado County, to the “Gilded One”, with the dream of instant wealth.

It is estimated that about 4,000 people worked in mines in the summer of 1848; by the end of 1849 that number grew to 40,000. Mining camps sprouted, as did restaurants, shops, schools, churches, and other establishments necessary to sustain the mining economy. Thriving Gold Rush towns, in the span of a few short years, had transformed the county and the state.
