Preferred Citation
[Identification of item]. United States Army, 73rd Evacuation Hospital Papers, The Huntington Library, San Marino, California.

Provenance
On long-term loan from the Los Angeles County Medical Association, 1992.

Historical Note
The 73rd Evacuation Hospital Unit was formed in 1940 in Los Angeles, California, and activated in 1942. In January 1943, the unit left the United States for the China-Burma-India theater during World War II. The unit arrived in Bombay in March 1943, and was transferred to Margherita, near Ledo in Assam, India, to provide services to the engineering units building the Ledo Road and Chinese soldiers.

In March 1944, the unit moved to Shingbwiyang in northern Burma and was stationed there until it was inactivated in July 1945. All medical officers were on the Attending Staff of the LAC/USC Medical Center and a majority of these were on the Staff of Good Samaritan Hospital.

Scope and Content
The collection consists of correspondence, documents, manuscripts, photographs, slides and ephemera. It primarily contains items donated to the Los Angeles County Medical Association (LACMA) Library by former members of the 73rd Evacuation Hospital Unit.
The majority of correspondence is from the 1980s, and consists of letters between former members of the unit with Dr. Lewis T. Bullock, founder and president of the Friends of the LACMA Library, and Elizabeth Crahan, Director of Library Services. These letters center around the acquisition of items related to the 73rd Evacuation Hospital Unit and reunion dinners.

Manuscripts include former unit members’ essays, diaries and memoirs. These items document the unit's activities, and describe the experiences of individual members during World War II. There are also copies of official military memorandums, and a report of a military action. The manuscripts include duplicates of photographs found elsewhere in the collection.

Writings by former unit members include:

"Clinical Survey of Eight-Six Cases of Scrub Typhus" by Clarence M. Agress and Edward R. Evans
"Contribution of Hospital in Time of War" by L.J. Tragerman
"Memoirs" by John M. Salyer
"My Diary of Experiences in India" by Ethel H. Weber

Photographs make up the bulk of the collection, and primarily represent the unit's activities and views of India and Burma during World War II. The collection also contains a large number of slides, many of which are duplicates of the photographs. The collection also contains ephemera from the LACMA Library exhibition about the unit, including wall panels and transparent sheets.

Arrangement

The collection is organized in the following manner:

Box 1: Correspondence, arranged in chronological order.

Box 2: Manuscripts, arranged in chronological order.

Boxes 2-11: Photographs, divided into subsections according to subject. This organization is based on the arrangement and categories created by the LACMA Library. Please note that a photograph placed in one category might also depict scenes related to other categories. Photographs of identified doctors and nurses are placed under their name.

Boxes 11-12: Slides. Located in two volumes of binders, as arranged at the LACMA Library.

Box 12: Ephemera.

Related Material

The Joseph H. Boyes papers, located at the Hoover Institution Archives, provide additional information about the 73rd Evacuation Hospital's activities in the China-Burma-India Theater during World War II. The collection includes a memoir, slides, and miscellany related to Boyes, a Lieutenant colonel in the United States Army Medical Corps, and surgeon in the 73rd Evacuation Hospital.
