Biographical Note

Donald Duke (1929-2010) was a publisher, writer, railroad photographer and collector. He was born in Los Angeles and, from the age of 10, lived in San Marino, California. He grew up riding the Pacific Electric Railway, which stopped two blocks from his home, embarking on a love for trains and train photography, which he shared with his father. After graduating from Colorado College, he worked in sales for Mobil Oil, and later as an agent for General Steamship Corporation. In the 1950s, Duke formed his own publishing company, Pacific Railroad Publications; it later became Golden West Books, incorporated in 1960. Duke published over a hundred books on trains and railroads, written by himself or other railroad historians. Many of the photographs and pieces of ephemera in this collection appeared in Golden West Books publications. Duke also wrote articles for and edited the Pacific Railway Journal and the Branding Iron quarterly for the Los Angeles Corral of Westerners. He was a member of the Lexington Group of railroad historians, founding member of Orange Empire Railway Museum in Perris, California, and active in several other train, rail and locomotive historical societies. He was a longtime reader at the Huntington Library, where he bequeathed his collection of over 2,000 railroad books and trade journals.

Scope and Content
This collection consists of railroad photographs, ephemera and publications, 1829-2010, with the bulk of material from the early- to mid-20th century. The focus is chiefly locomotives and trains (steam and diesel) of major railroads and interurban electric railways of the United States and Canada. Also represented in the collection are smaller shortline and narrow-gauge railroads; other foreign railroads; streetcars (or trolleys); and burgeoning light rail and subway systems.

Most of the ephemera is printed material produced by railroad companies for promotional and business purposes, such as annual reports, brochures, route maps and guides, timetables, tickets, dining menus, stationery, stock certificates, bond coupons and other items. There are also many city and state tourist guidebooks describing sights along rail routes or promoting land available for farming, mining or home-building across the United States. Also included are items produced for or by railroad employees, such as instruction and safety manuals, train orders, freight bills and in-house newsletters. Railroad industry publications, statistics and reports can be found in the American Association of Railroads files, which are part of Donald Duke’s subject files on railroad-related topics. Throughout the ephemera files are newspaper and journal clippings, often from scarce small press and trade publications such as The Railway and Engineering Review, The Railroad Gazette, The Santa Fe Magazine, The Western Railroader, Railway Age and others.

In addition to railroad history, other topics of social and cultural historical interest in the ephemera are:

- Depictions of African Americans and Native Americans in mass-marketed train travel brochures. There are many examples that reflect American cultural and class stereotypes in the early- to mid-20th century. Selected files are noted in the container list.
- Occupational safety and health: See railroad worker safety manuals and accident prevention literature in ephemera files.
- History of food and drink: See numerous dining and beverage menus throughout Railroads and Foreign Railroads ephemera files (not always noted in container list).
- History of graphic design and typography: See examples of early- and mid-20th century popular styles in printed ephemera throughout collection.

Photographs and negatives:
The photographs depict locomotives, freight and passenger trains, logging railroads, electric interurbans and streetcars across the United States. This was primarily a publisher’s file of ready-for-press photographs, which are almost all 8 x 10-inch black-and-white prints, made approximately 1950s-1980s. The photographs were made chiefly by various amateur train photographers, including Donald Duke, but most are uncredited. There are some copy prints (photographs of other photographs), and a few original photographs from the late 19th-early 20th century. Some photographs have locations and dates written on the back, but many are unidentified other than the name of the railroad.

The negatives are chiefly of locomotives of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway (“The Santa Fe”), Southern Pacific Railroad, and Union Pacific Railroad, made approximately 1940s-1950s. There are also many views of streetcars of Los Angeles-area lines: Los Angeles Metropolitan Transit Authority, Los Angeles Railway, Los Angeles Transit Lines, and the Pacific Electric Railway. There are a few negatives of other railroads, as well as stations, roundhouses, railyards, and copy negatives of miscellaneous train wrecks. The negatives were made by Donald Duke and others (often uncredited), with a small portion of copy negatives.

Series 1. Printed material and ephemera. 1829-2010 (bulk 1920s-1960s)

- Physical Description: 46 boxes
- Scope and Content Note

  Most folders in this series contain both ephemera and clippings. If a file contains only clippings, that is noted below. Ephemera of particular interest also noted below. Common items found here: promotional brochures, timetables, tickets, transfers, passes, menus, postcards.

A. Railroads, United States and Canada

- Scope and Content Note

  Date ranges in this subseries are not inclusive; the range shows the earliest identified date and the latest identified date within that section. Some early steam and diesel railroads migrated to electrified lines, so some electric rail items may appear. Also, note that the timetables contain more than train schedules; they often have fold-out route maps, information on towns and cities, connecting lines, special trains and more. Museum and tourist railroads are not included here; see “Subseries D. Subject files -- Museums, Historical Societies and Tourist Railroads.”

Los Angeles electric railways

Box 29 (Folders 29-48) and Box 30 (Folders 1-11) contain files related to electric railways in Los Angeles and includes ephemera produced by city agencies on rail transit development and then construction and operation of a light rail and subway system (Metro). Also includes city bus systems. Most items were produced by the Los Angeles County Transportation Commission (LACTC) or the Southern California Rapid Transit District (RTD). In 1993, the Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (MTA) was formed out of a merger of the two former agencies, LACTC and RTD.

Arrangement
Arranged roughly in chronological order of transit development, 1942 - 2000s.

Folder 29  Los Angeles Railway. approximately 1942
Contents: Fold-out route map showing lines of "Los Angeles Railway, Pacific Electric Railway and Los Angeles Motor Coach"; transfers; clippings.
Includes items for: Pacific Electric Railway Company
Also called: LARy or Yellow Car system
Related subject headings: Streetcars, trolley, bus

Folder 30  Los Angeles Transit Lines. 1946-1950
Contents: route maps, company letterhead, transfers; two copies of employee magazine "Two Bells" (July/August 1946, December 1946); clippings. Note: successor of Los Angeles Railway.

Folder 31  [Los Angeles rail transit development]. Ephemera. 1954-1967
Notable items: Three booklets promoting and envisioning rapid transit development in Los Angeles. [Of particular interest, one booklet foresees a subway system, which became a reality about 25 years later (MetroRail).]
Related subject headings: Subways--California--Los Angeles. ; Local transit -- California -- Los Angeles. ; Local transit -- Planning. NOTABLE L.A. Transportation ITEMS!

Folder 32  [Los Angeles rail transit development]. Ephemera. 1970s
Folder 33  [Los Angeles rail transit development]. Ephemera. 1985-1989
Promotional literature and reports produced by the Los Angeles County Transportation Commission and Southern California Rapid Transit District (RTD). Press kit about construction and planning for the Metro Red Line rail project.

Folder 34  Metro Rail Project (Los Angeles, Calif.). Blue Line (Los Angeles to Long Beach). 1983-2000
Operated by the Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority.
Related subject headings: [Light rail]

Folder 35  Metro Rail Project (Los Angeles, Calif.). Blue Line (Los Angeles to Long Beach). 1987-1990

Scope and Content Note

Dates have been listed for some but not all of the material in this subseries. Types of material in this section include clippings, advertisements, brochures, programs, reprints of academic papers and speeches, government policy reports, and trade reports. Some items in these files were published in Duke’s books, such as “Incline Railways of Los Angeles and Southern California” (Golden West Books, 1998), or used as research for journal articles.

Arrangement

Arrangement: The collector's subject headings have been retained for the most part. The files are organized in the following subgroups:

1) Association of American Railroads materials
2) Historical societies, railroad clubs and associations
3) Museums, historic sites and tourist railroads
4) Manufacturers and designers (locomotives, railroad equipment, transit systems
5) Railroad-related topics, A-Z.

Manufacturer and designers (locomotives, railroad equipment, transit systems)

This section contains American and foreign companies, which are arranged alphabetically by name. Items include press kits, promotional brochures and booklets, annual reports, advertisements, and a few files include clippings. Besides promoting products, these materials also address mass transportation needs and proposed solutions for the future; benefits of new technology; benefits of certain metals (steel, aluminum); and often cite data from institutional reports. Dates: bulk 1950s - 1990s.

Series 3. Negatives

Physical Description: 2,781 film negatives in 7 boxes, 4 x 5 inches and smaller; includes some 35mm color film.

Access Information

The negatives have been placed in cold storage for preservation. Arrangements for viewing negatives must be made in advance.

Scope and Content Note

This series contains film negatives, with most identified by railroad name, locomotive number, date and location, which were transcribed from the original negative sleeves. Photographers were mostly unidentified, but included Donald Duke and other amateur photographers.

A. Negatives: Railroads, United States

Scope and Content Note

The majority of images in this subseries show single locomotives, with some views of trains in transit or at roundhouses, rail yards or stations. Almost all were made in the 1940s-1950s by Donald Duke and other amateur photographers (chiefly uncredited). There are some copy negatives (copies of other photographs) of early locomotives.

Arrangement

Arranged alphabetically by railroad name, and then numerically by locomotive number.
