Scope and Content Note

THE ANDERSON FAMILY PAPERS cover the history, activities, lives, interests and accomplishments of three generations of an unusual American family.

The collection contains letters, of both personal and business nature, manuscripts of the literary and scientific work done by members of the family, photographs, snapshots, official documents (passports, certifications, deeds, wills, insurance papers, naturalization papers, death certificates, marriage certificates, etc.) and clippings concerning the political and historical matters of the day, and personal activities of the family.

Also contained in the collection are a number of genealogical notes. These notes show the family to have come chiefly of English-Scottish origins on one side and, in one branch, of Hudson River Duton on the other. They seem to have been of sturdy, middle-class stock, neither very rich nor very poor, essentially religious, Protestant, thrifty and, for the most part, well educated. There were ministers, lawyers and teachers in the family; one member was president of several colleges. In one generation there were two excellent scientists. There were writers, and several members were rewarded for service in the Union Army. Others were farmers, merchants, sea-faring men and fishermen.

The first member of the family, for whom a fairly complete record is available, is Edward Coffin Anderson. The collection contains his letters, records and certifications. From these documents can be gathered quite a complete history of his career as a minister, college teacher and college president as well as the history of his own personal life and the childhood background of Melville Rest Anderson.

The central figure of the collection is Melville Best Anderson, first son of Edward Coffin Anderson. The correspondence of Melville Anderson, with his parents, during his college years at Cornell University gives a good picture of the lives of the family at this particular time.

After his student years, both in the United States and in Europe, he began his long literary life. He contributed to various literary publications, the most notable of which was THE DIAL. Through his contributions to THE DIAL, he became a friend of Francis Fisher Browne, the Editor, and this long and satisfying friendship can be traced through the Browne letters contained in the collection.

The Browne letters are of special interest for in them can be seen the very high regard that Browne had for Anderson as one literary man for another, as well as the close personal friendship between the two men. These letters also contain a great deal of business matter concerning literary interests of the day.

Other letters of particular interest were written to Melville Best Anderson by Samuel S. McClure (editor of McClure's Magazine), John Muir, Anna Strunsky Walling, Gordon Craig, John Vance Cheney, Howard Criggs and Paget Toynbee. Most of this correspondence relates to business matters, but it also contains much to show the strong personal regard for Professor Anderson.

Most of Melville Best Anderson's correspondence consists of letters to him rather than from him. These letters indicate that he had a strong gift of friendship, not only for his contemporaries and colleagues, but for his students as well. Samuel S. McClure had been a student under Anderson as had Anna Strunsky Walling and John H. Finley, who was for many years connected with the New York Times and was president of City College of New York. The student for whom he had the greatest affection was Agnes Smith Mannucci-Capponi.

The collection also contains Melville Best Anderson's manuscripts of his work on Dante which was the greatest interest of his literary life. There are manuscripts of his other publications and his teaching notes.

THE ANDERSON PAPERS also contain the manuscripts, photographs, letters and clippings of Melville Best Anderson's two sons, Malcolm Playfair Anderson and Robert vanVleck Anderson. Malcolm Anderson was a [zoologist] 1/31/77 and natural scientist, interested chiefly in the Orient. He left not only his scientific notes, but also notes for a few short stories concerning the lives of the people where he had lived and worked in China. Robert Anderson, a geologist, was interested primarily in oil and was for some years in North Africa. Here he was interested not only in oil but in the archeology of the region. His correspondence with the United States Geological Survey and with James H. Brewster of the Oriental Institute gives some idea of the importance of his discoveries.

The women of the Anderson family should not be overlooked. They seem to have been as sturdy a group as their husbands. Their letters are interesting not only as personal documents but as reflections of the age, showing the great change in the status of women over four generations. They were not career women; they were essentially housewives and mothers of families, but their lives were active, and from their letters it is evident that they were educated, quick minded and interested in many things outside the usual domestic routine.

Biographical Note

THE ANDERSON FAMILY PAPERS cover the history of a distinguished family that, up to a point, followed a somewhat typical pattern in America. Of Scottish-English origins, with a short history in the Maritime Provinces, Canada, the family came to the United States in the middle of the nineteenth century. They settled on the East coast, later moving West. Here the Andersons diverged from the usual pattern. They made major contributions to society in the fields of theology, education and literature. They were intellectual people rather than industrialists. They did not lay railroads or pan for gold or wage wars with the Indians on the frontier. They did, however, found schools, preach sermons, write books and make substantial scholarly and scientific contributions to the community.

Edward Coffin Anderson, the first member of the family for whom there are extensive records, was born on Prince Edward Island, Maritime Provinces, Canada, in 1821, the fourth of thirteen children. His grandfather, John Anderson, had migrated to North America from Scotland with his brother, David, and son, David. David Anderson, the son, married Miss Jeanette Coffin, whose father had come to Prince Edward Island from Nantucket. Edward Coffin Anderson received his education in Nova Scotia at Acadia College, and later went to Newton Seminary near Boston for further theological study. While he was attending Acadia College at Wolfville, Nova Scotia, he met Miss Helen Best, a teacher in a school for girls.

The Best Family was also of Scottish descent. Helen's mother, Isabella Playfair, was a daughter of Robert Lawyer Playfair and a niece of John Playfair, the great mathematician of the University of Edinburgh. Her mother, Margaret McNevin was said to have been a brilliant and clever woman. When John Playfair was contemplating marriage, a friend advised, If you marry Margaret McNevin, all your children will be gifted. Isabella was educated at a school for young ladies conducted by her two aunts in Edinburgh. At sixteen she married Henry Best, of the British Navy, and they settled in Nova Scotia. They had thirteen children. Later, to help out the family finances, she established a school for girls in Wolfville, Nova Scotia. Isabella, herself, served as headmistress and two of her daughters, including Helen Best, were teachers in the school.

In 1850, Helen Best became the wife of Edward Coffin Anderson and later that same year the young couple emigrated to the United States where they lived for the rest of their lives. Anderson, when he finished his training at Newton Seminary, was ordained in the Baptist Church and began his long career of preaching and teaching. His first appointment was at Kalamazoo, Michigan. Edward and Helen Anderson had three sons, Melville Best Anderson, Robert Playfair Anderson (who died in infancy), and Edward Playfair Anderson.

From Kalamazoo, the family went to Newton Center, Massachusetts, to Milford, New Hampshire, and back to Kalamazoo where Mr. Anderson was professor of Classical Languages and acting president of Kalamazoo Baptist College. From Kalamazoo, they went to Margett, Michigan where Anderson was pastor. In 1866, the Andersons went to Portland, Oregon where Anderson assumed the post of pastor of the Baptist Church, and from there he went to San Jose, California. After a short time in San Jose, the family returned to the East coast, to Groveland, Massachusetts, where Mr. Anderson was pastor and also principal of Highlands Academy in Petersburg, Massachusetts. He became president of Ottawa College in Ottawa, Kansas, and pastor of Lake City Baptist Church in Lake City, Minnesota. About 1880, he became president of McMinnville College, McMinnville, Oregon, a post he held for seven years. In 1887, he had a stroke, and died three years later, in 1890, at the home of his son, Edward Playfair Anderson, in Lansing, Michigan.

From this varied background comes the central figure in the ANDERSON FAMILY PAPERS collection, Melville Best Anderson. The first son of Edward Coffin and Helen Best Anderson, he was born in Kalamazoo, Michigan in 1851. He attended Cornell University where, to a great extent, he worked his own way. The Papers indicate that he was an excellent student. At Cornell, he met David Starr Jordan and began a friendship that lasted for more than fifty years, and later brought Anderson to Stanford. In 1872, he graduated from Cornell and for several years he taught in the secondary schools in Appleton, Wisconsin. Jordan was also teaching there at the time.

In 1875, Melville Anderson married Miss Charlena van Vleck. Miss van Vleck, a student at Lawrence College, and her mother, Mrs. Louisa Gurnee van Vleck, widow of a Union soldier, had a home in Appleton. The van Vleck family came from the Hudson River country and were of Dutch descent. Charlena's mother was also from the Hudson Valley, but of English stock.

In 1875, Melville Anderson went to Gottingen, Germany and then to the University of Paris. In 1877, he returned to the United States and began his literary and professorial career. He went first to Butler University where he was awarded an M. A. degree and became professor of Modern Languages. Three years later, 1880, he went to Knox College where he remained for six years. After leaving, Knox, Melville Anderson spent a year at Purdue University and in 1887 he went to the State University of Iowa. During these years, he was writing and translating as well as teaching.

In October of 1891, he came to the newly established Leland Stanford Junior University, at the invitation of its president, David Starr Jordan. Anderson became the first chairman of the English Department, and it was at Stanford that he did the greater part of his teaching and writing. He taught from 1891 until 1910, retiring somewhat earlier than the usual age. A Carnegie grant enabled him to live in Italy where he continued his studies of Dante, the great work of his literary life. During this time, Mrs. Anderson and the two sons remained at home. Melville Anderson returned to California, but never lived permanently at Stanford. He went to Lajolla to be near his brother Edward, and died there in 1933.

Edward Playfair Anderson, second son of Edward Coffin and Helen Best Anderson, was born in 1856 and also pursued a teaching career. He received his A. B. degree from the University of Michigan in 1879 and his PhD. in 1886. He studied in France in 1880 and was professor of Latin and French at McMinnville College for two years, 1882-84. He returned to the University of Michigan to work on his doctorate. In 1888 he resumed teaching, first at Ohio University, then at Michigan Agricultural College and at Miami University in Ohio. Edward married Miss Hattie Amelia Baker and they had eight children. He moved to Lajolla, California where he died in 1951.

Melville Best Anderson had two sons who lived to maturity. Malcolm Playfair Anderson, born in 1878, was from his earliest boyhood interested in natural science and natural history. He graduated from Stanford as a zoologist. After graduation, his work and interests took him to many parts of Asia, chiefly China, Korea and Japan. In 1904, he led the Duke of Bedford Expedition to the Orient, collecting mammals for the British Museum. He took many photographs and made full notes on the collections. Also, he left notes on several short stories which dealt with the lives of the people with whom he lived and worked in the Orient.

Malcolm married Miss Elizabeth Gurnee, a distant cousin, and they had one son who died in infancy. In 1919 Malcolm Anderson was killed in an accident in the shipyards at Oakland, California. His death cut short a promising career as a naturalist and explorer.

The youngest of Melville Best Anderson's sons, Robert van Vleck Anderson, was born in 1884 and like all the Anderson children, received the early part of his education in Germany. Robert Anderson attended Stanford, graduating as a geologist. He also was interested in natural history and archeology. He was in Asia for a time with his brother, Malcolm, and then went to North Africa as an oil geologist.

In North Africa, he discovered some hitherto unexplored prehistoric caves. He was fully aware of the importance of this discovery and, with grants from the United States Geological Survey and with help and encouragement from the Oriental Institute and James H. Breasted, he was able to excavate them.

In 1923, he married Miss Gracella Rountree of Berkeley, California. They had three children. The Andersons lived in North Africa for many years and traveled widely in Europe, Asia and South America. He worked in Washington, D. C. with the United States Geological Survey from 1906-1913. After that time he worked for several oil companies, including Whitehall Petroleum in London, one of two British firms, and as a consultant to many others in various parts of the world. Upon his retirement in 1945, he lived near Stanford-company whitehall Petroleum in London where he was a research associate until his death in 1949. His widow, children and grandchildren are still (1963) living in the vicinity.
