Abstract: Images depicting transportation from various sources.
Scope and Content
Miscellaneous photograph collection containing accessions of original and copy prints depicting railroads, street cars, airplanes, automobiles, ships and other forms of transportation. Material was formerly part of Stanford's Hopkins Transportation Library. Images are in a variety of formats - mounted and unmounted, paper prints (possibly contacts or reprints), copy prints & negatives, etc. Collection is not limited to photographs (see Box 1 especially). Likewise, other HTL collections may also contain photos.
Of note are several albumen prints attributed to Alfred Hart's Central Pacific series (many of which appear to be variously cropped versions of negatives) as well as large photographs of a Ladies Driving Club in England. There is also a memoir about Lawrence Hargrave by A.E. Beriman, material relating to the Royal Aeronautical Society and The Early Birds of Aviation, and a piece of original fabric from the Wright Brothers plane at Kitty Hawk. Also includes railroad stock certificates, the aviation papers of Stanley H. Page, and other miscellaneous materials relating to transportation.

Related Materials
While there is no original documentation, these photographs (approx. 36 4x3/4" thin paper prints) have been identified as the work of Alfred Hart, staff photographer for the Central Pacific from 1864-1868. Some images match published stereoviews by him. The majority depict trains, trestles, tracks, and mountain scenery. Several document the interiors of Pullman cars. A few have writing on their verso. Many prints appear to be variously cropped versions of single negatives.
