Scope and Content
This collection of books, letters, and other manuscripts was amassed by James A. Healy from his early days as a bibliophile in the thirties until his death in 1975. Its greatest strengths are in the areas in which he had personal contacts: his friendship with Oliver St. John Gogarty; his extended correspondence with Elizabeth C. Yeats and George Yeats, from whom he obtained all the Dun Emer and Cuala Press books (a great number of which were inscribed by their authors or by W. B. Yeats); a very fine selection of Cuala Press greeting cards and prints; and his contacts with Ernest Boyd, Richard Campbell, and Irene Haugh, which brought him AE's letters to those recipients and some of his unpublished lectures.
The interest of the collection extends further, to figures who were primarily artists rather than writers, such as Paul Henry and W. B. Yeats’ father, brother, and two sisters, and entrepreneurs and actors such as the Fay Brothers and Dudley Digges. There is a handful of interesting letters from James Joyce, John M. Synge, Maud Gonne, and George Moore. In addition, from the critic Ernest Boyd’s estate Healy obtained letters from Irish writers prompted by Boyd’s research for his book, The Irish Literary Renaissance (1916).

Arrangement Note

PART ONE

The letters have been arranged alphabetically by writer; within each writer’s section they are placed alphabetically by recipient. Any MSS or printed articles by, or clippings about, each individual immediately follow letters by him or her.

The numerous insignificant letters from libraries, publishers, etc. have been arranged alphabetically in folders labelled A, B, C, and so forth, but are not further itemized. Letters from unknown individuals to significant figures such as AE are, however, itemized separately, as are a few letters from unknown individuals to Healy which contain interesting references.

At the end of the manuscript section of the collection, Box 16 contains the Dun Emer and Cuala Press printed materials (other than books and oversize prints); a folder of Elizabeth C. Yeats’ letters and enclosed announcements, the gift of Mr. J. Richard Blanchard; and a copy of the Cuala Press keepsake printed for the opening of the Stanford exhibition in 1976.

Photographs are listed here, but are maintained in a separate departmental Photograph File.

Only the most important material from the substantial Vertical File of miscellaneous clippings has been catalogued.

A Cross-Reference Listing, of significant figures written to or about, is also provided.

PART TWO

This covers all the Dun Emer and Cuala Press books and broadsides, with their inscriptions transcribed at length, and the books of particular interest from other presses more briefly. They are combined in one listing, alphabetized by author. Magazines and auction catalogues are also itemized briefly.

EDITORIAL PROCEDURES
Undated letters are placed at the end of any given folder, except when there is strong circumstantial evidence for their being placed earlier.

Dates in brackets, [], are transcribed from the postmark or an annotation by another reader such as JAH, or deduced from internal evidence.

The number of pages, not sheets, is given after the dash in each entry. Thus a single sheet, written on both sides, with two photocopies of it, would be entered as ALS - 2 (2).

Dates are given in the following form: month/day/year (i.e. English-style dating has been changed to American style).
Photocopies of an original that is in the collection are placed at the end of their folder, separated by Perma-life paper.

SECTION II THE HEALY COLLECTION OF IRISH LITERATURE BOOKS
Note
A NOTE ON PART II
Part II catalogues both the Dun Emer-Cuala Press books and books from other presses. The listing is a single one, arranged alphabetically by author and, within each author, by title.
The entries for the Dun-Emer-Cuala Press books are long, as they give all details of autographs, bookplates, material laid in, and -- their outstanding feature -- their inscriptions. These have been transcribed as closely as possible to reflect line endings, misspellings, slips, and deletions. Bibliographically however, the entries are brief, as full information on the books can be found in Liam Miller's The Dun Emer, Later the Cuala Press (Dublin: The Cuala Press. 1973) and Alan Wade's bibliography of W. B. Yeats.
The principle of selection for inclusion here, from the numerous Irish books from other presses in the Healy Collection, has been each book's rarity, inscriptions, literary interest or, occasionally (as in the Jack Yeats exhibition catalogues), reference value.

Whenever I put into the Cuala books a book not upon an Irish theme it had some relation to Irish work generally at the Abbey Theatre. When this book was published we were about to set out a series of plays in the Japanese manner though on Irish themes. Ezra Pounds translation is in the style afterwards copied by Waley in his well known translations of the Noh drama of Japan.

Elbow Room.
Astronomers describe a place Seen through a crack in the vault of Space So dark so absolute so far No light wave from the oldest star, Nor even the thought of God can reach And, fainting, fall on that far beach; abhorrent and inhuman, this, Chineses call 'The Great Abyss'. But I am cheered, for now I know There's somewhere left for a man to go - (Always supposing one would care When dead, for going anywhere.) But what a place to make your goal, And lift your head and rouse your soul! Oh! what a place to speak your mind! Without disquieting mankind! There's where I would find elbow room Alone, beyond the Crack of Doom! Oliver St. J Gogarty

If I were a salmon to swim in the stream, Or a trout to leap in the lake,
Or a butterfly bright when the golden gleam Of the sun bids butterflies wake, If I were a fox to lurk in the rocks And wander at night for prey, Or an eagle to fly through the folds of the sky, Or a thrush to sing on the spray,
If I were a Kite with a wide-spread wing To sweep far over the plain,
Or a beast or a bird or a fish or a thing Which has not a soul to pain,
I never would envy the lot of a man, For man has a soul to ache,
A conscience to smite and a thought to bite And a weary heart to break.
Douglas Hyde (An Craoibin)
Inscription of fourth front flyleaf:
To James A Healy. The prose in this book & in Hyde's earlier Beside the Fire was the first imaginative, serious use of Irish dialect. Before this we had nothing, but the comic dialect of the novelists which is town dialect. The Religious Songs of Connacht would have been another masterpiece but he sent it, at my suggestion, to Father Finlay, the Dublin Jesuit for publication in some magazine. Finlay, having no literary feeling, was shocked at the style & he said he would not publish it unless it was 'in either Irish or English'. Hyde an humble man about his own work did what he wished & never again wrote good prose. Like Augusta Gregory Hyde writes Norman English badly. She learned her beautiful poetic style first from The Love Songs of Connacht.

He read his verse better than any man I have ever heard read. He had a very subtle and yet very stately way of speaking it & this quality - this great distinction in voice & manner he had not less in public speaking. He had this imagination of personality very strongly & all his personal relations with this world were studied & skilful beyond those of other men. I shall not again meet courtesy like his.

Comfort.
The skies were dim and vast and deep
Above the vale of rest.
They seemed to rock the stars to sleep
Beyond the mountain’s crest.
I sought for graves I had mourned, but found
The roads were blind. The grave
Even of love, heart-lost, was drowned
Under times brimming wave.
Huddled beneath the wheeling sky,
Strange was my comfort there,
That stars and stones and love and I
Drew to one sepulchre.

There is much about my uncle George Pollexfen in this wise (?) & simple book. He was a fine story teller. Andrew Jameson told me that he once went to Sligo with him & soon after they got inot the train My uncle began a story & finished it at the exact moment when the train reached Sligo at end of four or five hours. Andrew Jameson said it had not a dull moment. I dare say it went through seven generations. George Pollexfen was a great judge of horses and raced them as advised by their horoscopes.

The poems headed 'To a dying Lady' are about Mabel Beardsley, the sister of the artist. She died of cancer. A number of her friends took an afternoon each that she might always, if she wished, have a visitor. She was an heroic person. She always managed to seem well. If any body had a cold she never failed to ask after it. I did not see her at the very end. I was in Ireland.

THE WIND AMONG THE REEDS: W.B. Yeats: 1899

This is a lovely book, and it has been a joy to look at its embellishments; most often by writers and artists I have known.

One of the loveliest lyrics in it - indeed, one of the most perfect of its time from the point of view of literary technique - is `The Cloths of Heaven'.

Had I the heavens' embroidered cloths, Enwrought with golden and silver light, The blue and the dim and the dark cloths Of night and light and the half light, I would spread the cloths under your feet: But I, being poor, have only my dreams; I have spread my dreams under your feet; Tread softly because you tread on my dreams.

Out of a deep personal emotion it springs; but like all work of its kind, through a subtle alchemy that only the poet knows, it becomes the impersonal utterance of every lover that loves hotly.

Who was the woman who inspired this lyric, and others, in The Wind Among the Reeds?

She is still happily living, old now in years but ever-young in spirit - one whose early ideals have not been surrendered to the violence or the chicanery of Irish life; a worshipper before the shrine of traditional Irish beauty; a friend of the Irish poor and outcast; a comforter of the soldiers and prisoners who served Ireland through direst suffering from the latter days of Humanism to the Civil War of 1922-23. Her activity, I believe, can only end with her death; but for such a character there is no dissolution.

Poetical exile, I hail her - Maud Gonne!

Inscribed by author on a front flyleaf:

For James A Healy The Poems about Lady Gregory those on pages 8 & 9 are the best in the book. Lady Gregory died I think in 1932. At the request of her family I stayed during the last year of her life at Coole Park. I was not not [sic] there when she died. I had gone to Dublin, sent by her I think to ask some questions of her surgeon. I got a telegram that she was sinking but it was delayed [and] I arrived too late. After the telegram had been sent to me she got up, dressed, & sat in her study with an open book. The parson called went up & came away `I think I cheered her up. I will come again next week' He had not noticed anything. He had no doubt gossiped a little. She would not have let him speak of religion that was her souls secret W B Yeats 1938
