Telephone conversations Series 1 1973-1978

Processing Information

Audio recordings of Shockley's telephone conversations originally arranged as "Series 1" were later incorporated into the "Audiovisual material" subseries in Accession ARCH-2007-198. There is no series 1.

Correspondence Series 2 1958-1971

Scope and Contents

Series 2 contains volumes of incoming and outgoing chronological correspondence files. A typed index, listing dates, names and institutional affiliation of all correspondence and correspondents is in the front of each volume. The files span the years 1958 - 1971. Subjects discussed in this correspondence include the importance of genetic factors in intelligence, the overpopulation problem and birth control, eugenics, student unrest (particularly, incidents at Stanford), environmental issues (specifically air pollution) and various requests for Dr. Shockley to speak, and for reprints of his articles. These files are stored in ten record storage boxes and two manuscript boxes.

Shockley family papers Series 4 1880-1977

Scope and Contents note

Series 4 contains the personal papers of May Bradford Shockley, William B. Shockley's mother. Along with financial and legal records are correspondence with friends and family, dating back to May Shockley's youth in California and her life in a Nevada mining town around the turn of the century, and continuing until the early 1970's. Also included is correspondence and papers of other family members, including William Hillman Shockley (father of W.B.S.). Several journals of Sarah Hillman Shockley, 1859-1965, along with a draft of her autobiography and other writing efforts are in this series, as well as several diaries and address books belonging to May Bradford Shockley. In addition, there are two folders of genealogical information, one for W.H. Shockley, and the other for May B. Shockley's family. This series also contains many photographs, and several scrapbooks of the Shockley family, dating back to the 1860's.

May Bradford Shockley's papers also include some information on her son. One folder contains old school diplomas, commencement brochures and newsclippings about William B. Shockley. There is also intermittent correspondence from him and his wife, to M. B. Shockley, 1924-1966.

ClippingsScope and Contents note

Various clippings, magazines, reports, conference material, and other printed matter, arranged chronologically. Some are annotated by WS. Material from after his death in August 1989 was assembled by Emmy Shockley, including 2001-2002 printouts from the internet. Many include references to WS. Topics largely focus on race, genetics, family planning, technology/Silicon Valley, as well as broader economic, foreign policy, and right wing/conservative political subjects.

Libel, Atlanta Constitution

libel, Atlanta Constitution 1980-1985Scope and Contents note

WS was plaintiff in a libel suit against Cox Enterprises Inc., publisher of the Atlanta Constitution, and Roger Witherspoon, a journalist for the newspaper. The trial took place in Atlanta, Georgia in September 1984. Witherspoon, who is African American, profiled WS in an unfavorable light in a July 30th, 1980 article. The article, which was based on a series of interviews, suggested that WS's eugenics program was essentially the same as that of Nazi Germany. After the Constitution refused to print a retraction, WS sought $1,250,000 in damages. WS won the suit, but was awarded one dollar. The case was appealed unsuccessfully. The file includes correspondence, essays, notes, articles, and several unfolded bound volumes of legal transcripts.

Libel, California Today 1981Scope and Contents note

WS appeared as the cover story for San Jose Mercury News' California Today magazine on August 9th, 1981. After WS contacted them with issues about how he was represented, The Mercury News printed corrections. While WS did consult with attorneys, a lawsuit proved unnecessary. Includes correspondence, notes, articles, and drafts.

Reprints, Information (I) seriesScope and Contents note

Newspaper and magazine articles, editorials, correspondence, essays, transcripts, and other material, nearly all concerning WS and his second career promoting what he termed "human quality" issues. This series was maintained by WS for reference and distribution purposes. Each file was assigned a number with the prefix "I" (presumably for Informational). These files are approximately chronological and grouped around significant events (such as classroom disruptions, panels, debates and media appearances, SWOPSI hearings, and NAS meetings). Most material is photocopied; however some original clippings, press releases, drafts and signed correspondence is present. Blue copies were for FREED distribution. Items related to his run for senate have a "P" prefix. There is a full index in Box 71.

Newspaper and magazine articles, editorials, correspondence, essays, transcripts, and other material, nearly all concerning WS and his second career promoting what he termed "human quality" issues. This series was maintained by WS for reference and distribution purposes. Each file was assigned a number and is most likely related to the Information (I) series with duplication of the (I) series likely. These files are approximately chronological and grouped around significant events (such as classroom disruptions, panels, debates and media appearances, SWOPSI hearings, and NAS meetings). Most material is photocopied; however some original clippings, press releases, drafts and signed correspondence is present. Some files include IBM magnetic cards. Blue copies were for FREED distribution.

Within the numbered series there are 3 parallel filings of 445-480, which include some duplication, but also some unique material across the parallel files.

Shockley Family and PersonalScope and Contents note

This series contains diaries, notebooks, artwork and correspondence, primarily from WS' parents William Hillman and May Bradford Shockley. The majority of Shockley family material in this accession was saved by WS following May's death in 1977. WS wrote about the experience in a commemorative booklet included here. May's own files are mostly small sketches and paintings. Most photographs not attached to notebook pages have been moved to the Photographs series. See also May Shockley papers in first accession Series 4, other WHS diaries in Box 12 of the first accession, and the William Hillman Shockley papers, circa 1860-circa 1920 \(SC1108\).

William and May Shockley approached the rearing of their only child in a very scientific manner, and subsequently there is a considerable amount of detail about the birth and childhood of WS (known here as "Billy"), including charts of his diet, health and growth and lists of books read to, as well as artwork, a lock of hair, and even a splinter removed from his face after a mishap on a front porch. References to his inquisitiveness, temper, stubbornness, and manual dexterity suggest much of what later characterized him.

The group of notebooks by WHS provide many insights about the Shockleys and life in Palo Alto in the teens. These notebooks feature diaries (some also doubling as correspondence to family members), notes, lists, clippings (most from the Daily Palo Alto News), and material related to his role in the Simplified Spelling movement. Some correspondence has been pasted in notebooks, including a telegram from William Randolph Hearst telegram in 1916.

The diaries make note of WHS' involvement with the Engineers Club (of which he was Vice President), as well as his mining, real estate and other business ventures. Also revealed are interactions with friends (including the Hoovers), neighbors, and professors at Stanford, as well as accounts of excursions to Lake Lagunita, La Honda and elsewhere. WHS wrote about World War I even before the U.S. entered the conflict, and when Camp Fremont was built in Menlo Park, WHS took an interest in the recreation of soldiers. May was also active in food rationing, home economics and Belgian relief efforts during the war. Finally, the diaries chronicle the family's travels in Los Angeles, New York, Florida, and Louisiana (where they bought a pet alligator), as well as London (where they were living when WS was born) and continental Europe.

Also grouped here are some unrelated WS personal files, such as material concerning his mountain climbing and magic trick interests, an art class notebook from Hollywood High School, an autograph book from Caltech, and a 1931 exercise pamphlet in which he posed as a model. This series also features later genealogy-related correspondence between WS and others.

WHS notebooks and diaries 1909-1925WS diaries and day planners 1938-1989*Scope and Contents note

Day planners, notebooks, and annotated desk calendars, unfolded and arranged chronologically. Some were used only sporadically, particularly 1989. These notebooks contain both personal and professional information; 1955 notebooks have family correspondence, notes and correspondence about his divorce from Jean Shockley, as well as notes from his initial meeting with Beckman. 1961-1980 notebooks were numbered 10-35 and begin with his extended recovery from a serious automobile accident. Bohemian Club notebooks were transferred to other BC material in Box 62, and a 1932 autograph book from Caltech (including an autograph from Linus Pauling) was moved to the Shockley family/personal series.

Scope and Contents note

Contains teaching materials such as quizzes, tests, handouts, and lecture notes, from WS' Electrical Engineering EE327A/B and Freshman Seminar 28 and 92 classes at Stanford, as well as other correspondence, memoranda, and notes. There are files about his denied SWOPSI (Stanford Workshops on Political and Social Issues) proposal for a course on eugenics, a folder about the "2xx0661" project backed by the Pioneer Fund, a FREED binder on Student Recruiting At Stanford, and 1983 Freshman Orientation Speech correspondence. There is also a small amount of correspondence about the donation of the Shockley Collection to Stanford. See also theses, science education, computing general and the "I" series of reprints for more Stanford-related material.
