Biographical/Historical Sketch
SCIRE (Student Center for Innovation in Research and Education) was established in 1970 to initiate and focus attention on educational change and increase students' responsibility for their own education. It offered academic credit for individual and group projects and internships and provided funding for innovative projects. Initially under the auspices of the Dean of Undergraduate Studies, it was transferred to the domain of the School of Humanities and Sciences in 1982. It ceased operations in 1985.
