Preferred Citation
Displaced Homemakers Center Archives, D-216, Department of Special Collections, General Library, University of California, Davis.

Scope And Content
The Displaced Homemakers Center Archives contains material relating to the organization, function, and administration of the Oakland, California center. Types of materials include correspondence, office files, and subject files.

The archives from the center, the first of its kind in the United States, trace its development from conception through several years of operation. As a whole, the files offer a unique view of early efforts for the recognition of the employment needs of older women. Personal letters from around the country clearly demonstrate the need for the services that the Oakland center provided. Office files illustrate the organization and daily function of the center, while subject files show what issues were of utmost concern to the center and its clients.

The collection covers the period from 1976 to 1981 when center services and administration were located on the Mills College Campus. Materials from the period after the transfer of direct services to Peralta Community College are lacking.
