Administrative History
The California Club of the University of California was founded in 1934 by Robert Gordon Sproul, President of the University. According to its constitution, the purpose of the California Club: "shall be to maintain harmonious relations and unity among the student groups of the several campuses of the University of California through the development and maintenance of the highest possible standards of sportsmanship, friendship, and cooperation."
The organization of a Davis chapter of the California Club began with the appointment of Herbert A. Young, Professor of Chemistry, as faculty adviser in November 1936.
The first annual convention of the four chapters of the California Club was held in Berkeley on September 8, 1940. In later years the club expanded to the other University campuses. In addition to the original purpose, the club later served as an agency for the communication of opinions between students and the President on matters concerning the University. Under the presidency of Clark Kerr, the club was regularly assigned problems to study and evaluate for the President.
The 1962 convention was held at the Davis campus.
