Access

Most of the collection is open for research immediately upon request. However, because the collection contains personnel records, some materials are restricted. In Series 1, Administrative Records, and Series 4, Personal and Professional Files, restricted materials have been identified and separated, and they are marked as such in this guide's contents listing. Series 2, Correspondence, contains personnel records interfiled throughout the series, so unrestricted materials in this series can only be made available with advance notice. Finally, materials in Series 7, Audio Recordings, must also be requested in advance so use copies can be made. Researchers who wish to request access to materials in Series 2 and Series 7 should contact the Department of Special Collections and Archives.

In addition, this collection contains unprocessed additions which may contain restricted materials. Please contact the Department of Special Collections and Archives in advance to request access.

Historical Background

Jack W. Peltason was the second chancellor of the University of California, Irvine, serving from 1984 to 1992. A distinguished political scientist and constitutional scholar, Peltason was also one of UC Irvine's founding faculty.

Peltason was born in St. Louis, Missouri, on August 29, 1923. He earned his bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Missouri and his Ph.D. from Princeton University in 1947.

His first academic position was at Smith College in Northampton, Massachusetts, where he taught from 1947 to 1951. In 1951 he joined the faculty of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, where he rose to the position of dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences in 1960.

It was during this time that Peltason co-authored his classic textbook Government by the People. Since its first publication in 1952, the book has been issued in numerous editions and is considered a fundamental text on American democracy for political science students.

As a member of UC Irvine's founding faculty, he was appointed dean of the College of Arts, Letters, and Science in 1963 when the campus was still in the planning phase. As dean, he had responsibility for approving academic plans for each division and recruiting faculty to a campus that had not yet been built. In 1964 he was named UC Irvine's second vice chancellor of academic affairs. In this position he played a leading role in guiding the creation of the university's original academic plan.
In 1967 Peltason returned to the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign as chancellor, a position he held until 1977. He then became the chief spokesman for higher education as the president of the American Council on Education in Washington, D.C., from 1977 to 1984.

Peltason returned to UC Irvine in 1984 to become the campus's second chancellor. Early on he established the UCI Medal to recognize the contributions of university and community members to the campus; the Medal has since been awarded to numerous distinguished individuals and is the campus's highest honor.

During his eight-year term UC Irvine underwent unprecedented physical growth, increased funding for endowed chairs and distinguished professors, initiated community partnerships, and attracted major institutes, notably the UC Humanities Research Institute in 1987 and the National Academies of Sciences & Engineering in 1988.

In 1992 Peltason was appointed president of the University of California during a major budgetary crisis. He was able to stabilize the UC budget through an agreement with Governor Pete Wilson.

When he retired from the presidency in 1995, Peltason passed up deferred salary and pension funds and instead donated the $230,000 towards an endowment. As a result, the Jack and Suzanne Peltason Scholarship provides merit-based awards to help UC Irvine political science majors advance their educational careers. In 2007 an anonymous donor pledged more than $1 million to UC Irvine for the creation of the Jack W. Peltason Endowed Chair, which goes to a faculty member within the Center for the Study of Democracy.

Following his retirement, Peltason was active in many community and professional organizations, even after being diagnosed with Parkinson's disease in 2002. As of 2009 Peltason could still be found having lunch at the University Club on the UC Irvine campus with his wife, Suzanne. The couple has three children and many grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Collection Scope and Content Summary

This collection comprises records documenting Jack W. Peltason's work as the second chancellor of the University of California, Irvine, a position he held from 1984 to 1992. Included are records relating to Peltason's administrative duties, community involvement, and professional activities, as well as memorabilia and records related to his inauguration.

The collection includes incoming and outgoing correspondence from the Office of the Chancellor, typescripts and drafts of speeches he delivered, briefing materials on labor issues, records of initiatives related to increasing diversity on campus, meeting materials for the Council of Chancellors of the University of California, and planning materials for his transition to the presidency of the University of California. Many records such as correspondence, memoranda, agendas, and meeting minutes document Peltason's involvement in professional and community organizations. Also included are memorabilia; inauguration planning materials such as committee notes, protocol manuals, and scripts; and inaugural documentation such as an audio recording and event programs. The collection also includes an audio recording of an interview with Peltason conducted for an oral history project of the American Political Science Association, an organization of which he was a longtime active member.

The collection includes some records from the previous administration, that of Daniel G. Aldrich, as well as the records of Dennis Smith, who served as acting chancellor of UC Irvine between October 1992 and June 1993.

Collection Arrangement

This collection is arranged in 7 series.

Separation Note

Personal papers of Jack W. Peltason that were not created during his tenure as chancellor were separated and added to MS-F019, Jack W. Peltason Papers. The following publications were removed from this collection and cataloged separately in the UC Irvine Libraries catalog ANTPAC:

Appraisal Note

Personal financial, tax, and medical records of Jack W. Peltason and his wife, Suzanne T. Peltason, were not retained. The following publications found the chancellor's personal and professional files that were already available in the UC Irvine library were also not retained:

Processing Note

In order to facilitate access, the collection was minimally processed. Most dates are approximate. Most of the materials are in their original folders or were taken out of binders and placed in new folders. (An exception to this is Series 2, Subseries 1, the chronological files of outgoing correspondence, which were kept in their binders.) Since materials have not been re-folded, many folders contain their original labels and are therefore not labeled with titles identical to those found in the contents listing in this guide, which were written to aid the researcher by adding further description. Moreover, some of the folders in Series 5, Personal and Professional Files, are labeled on each folder's side rather than the top owing to the type of filing cabinet in which the files had been stored and used. To facilitate access, folders were numbered during processing so numbers written in pencil on folders match those in the guide.

When they arrived in the University Archives, most of the materials were generally grouped in the series identified in this guide; however, similar materials were not always found in consecutive boxes. During processing, the collection was not completely re-arranged, so materials in the same series are still in boxes that may not be consecutively numbered. Researchers will find that navigating the materials in this collection will be facilitated by keeping a copy of the contents listing with them during their research.
