Abstract: The UCI Community Outreach Partnership Center (COPC) was founded in 2001 and based in the School of Social Ecology. It served as a bridge between UCI and the surrounding community engaging in research, teaching, and outreach projects addressing community priorities related to demographic change. The unit became defunct in 2016. The collection documents the activities of the COPC throughout its existence, from 2001 to 2016, and contains information on the communities and neighborhoods that were part of research and program activities. Materials include proposals for the Center and its programs, marketing and press materials, reports, presentations, and administrative documents. There is information on various COPC programs including the Latino Youth Conference, Westside Costa Mesa Research and Engagement, Community Scholars, and Center for Inequity.

Access
