Biography

William Kenneth Livingston was born on October 21, 1892, in Sparta, Wisconsin to John W. Livingston and Sarah F. (Burr) Livingston. He received his BA in 1913 from the University of Oregon, and married Ruth Forbes Brown shortly thereafter, on February 28, 1914. They had two sons, Kenneth Edwin (1914-84) and Robert B., both of whom followed their father's footsteps into neuroscience.

Livingston began professional life as the head of a high school science department (1914-16) in Pendleton, Oregon, while he pursued his MA in Zoology (University of Oregon, 1915) and took some preliminary courses in medical school. The Livingstons then moved to Boston for about six years for William to finish medical school. He received his MD from Harvard in 1920, followed by two years in surgical residence at Massachusetts General Hospital.

Returning to Oregon, Livingston set up private practice in Portland, 1922-44, with medical school affiliation at the University of Oregon. In 1927 he published his first paper, "Visceral Pain," in Northwest Medicine, and in 1935 his first book The Clinical Aspects of Visceral Neurology (Charles C. Thomas, Springfield, Illinois). His second book, Pain Mechanisms (MacMillan, NY, NY) came out in 1943 and was reprinted in 1947 and 1976.

During WWII, Livingston studied more than 2000 nerve-injured soldiers, taking extensive notes in the form of patient histories, follow-ups, and drawings. He entered active Naval service as a Lieutenant Commander on January 11, 1943. He served as the Chief of Neurosurgery Service at U.S. Naval Hospital in Oakland, California from August, 1945 until August, 1946, and was released from service at the rank of Captain on October 31, 1946. Immediately after service he spent a year as a visiting professor at New York University, the Royal College of Surgeons, Oxford University and Cambridge University. Livingston spent the rest of his medical career as Professor and Chairman of the Department of Surgery at the University of Oregon, from 1947 to 1958.

Livingston retired in 1958, when he and Ruth moved to Eastern Oregon. He continued to pursue many of his hobbies, which included, at various times in his life, racquet sports, wrestling, fishing, sailing, archery, pottery, photography, painting and music. He also worked on the manuscript of what he hoped would be his most complete book, Pain and Suffering, but it remains unfinished and unpublished.

William Livingston died at age 73 on March 22, 1966, while visiting a friend in Portland, Oregon, of coronary thrombosis.

Scope and Content

The William K. Livingston Papers were received from his daughter-in-law Katherine Livingston in 1996 with one additional box on 10 October 1997.

Notes
Scope and Content Note

A major focus of this series is the Pain and Suffering manuscript. These notes and typescripts were meant to contribute to Livingston's book Pain and Suffering, on which he was working at the time of his death. The rest of the series comprises drafts of lectures, annotated articles, largely manuscript subject files, and the like.

CorrespondenceScope and Content Note

This brief series is a mixture of chronological, alphabetical, and subject correspondence folders. Incoming as well as, less often, outgoing correspondence is represented.

Case Histories, Inactive and Non-MissileScope and Content Note

These World War II case histories (1943-50) detail hundreds of peripheral nerve casualties and pain cases treated by Dr. Livingston. In addition to extensive notes and follow-ups, almost every case file contains drawings by Livingston showing areas of injury, pain sensation, nerve damage, etc. They are restricted.

Patient FilesScope and Content Note

This restricted material comes from two original Livingston boxes, one labelled "Patient Files A-Z Plus Misc" and the other labelled "Patient Files." The original folders for most of this series had additional information (usually names) written on them. Archival copies of that information have been made and inserted into each final, acid-free folder.

PersonalScope and Content Note

This brief series comprises military records, newspaper clippings (including book reviews and WKL obituaries), curriculum vitae files, and other materials of a personal nature.
