Biographical Note
Professor Vélez-Ibáñez's work centers on one basic question: How do we as a species manage to survive the enormous stresses of global, national, regional, and local pressures and constraints to live out our lives in a relatively humane manner. The question has underlain all his academic work in urban Mexico, in the Southwestern United States, and in Puerto Rico. He asks more specific questions about the development of cultural "funds of knowledge" as modifiers at different levels: household, community, region, and in non-physical localities. This interest is also tied to questions of adaptation, the distribution of sadness, the emergence of social networks and language change, economic and technical shifts within the structure of households, and the migration of human populations. Professor Vélez-Ibáñez is also interested in the application of knowledge for the benefit of those populations with whom we work.

Scope and Content
This is a research collection of Velez-Ibanez's papers and notes on the forced sterilization of woman of Latin American descent in the United States in the late 1930s. Most of the materials are photocopies.

Collection consists of approx. 5 linear feet of Velez-Ibanez's notes and photocopied court transcripts.

The collection is organized into the following series:
- Series 1. Research Papers
- Series 2. Court Papers
