Biography

Russell Juarez Birdwell was born on October 17, 1903. He worked for Hearst newspapers in Los Angeles and New York, and covered Charles Lindbergh's takeoff for Paris. He directed two silent movies in 1929 and a short in 1933. Subsequently he became the head of publicity for David O. Selznick. In February 1939 he opened his own office, Russell Birdwell and Associates, in Beverly Hills and New York, with occasional offices in London and Chicago. Among the many he publicized were actresses Carole Lombard, Marlene Dietrich, Janet Gaynor, Joan Blondell, and Jane Russell; companies Celotex and Associated Filmmakers; businessman Howard Hughes; King Carol II of Romania; and major films including Gone with the Wind and The Outlaw. In 1939 he published the autobiographical novel I Ring Doorbells. In 1941 he traveled to England and wrote the book Women in Battle Dress (1942) based on his observations. In later years he published a volume of poetry (1969) and the novel Mount Horeb (1972). He died on December 15, 1977 in Oxnard, California.

Scope and Content

These papers date almost entirely from the years 1936-1946. In this period Birdwell was employed by David O. Selznick (1936-1939) and operated his own publicity agency (1939-1946). Items include extensive correspondence and memoranda, newspaper and magazine clippings, press releases, and photographs. Materials pertain to both Birdwell's clients and to his personal and professional interests.

Organization and Arrangement

Arranged in the following series:

1. Client files.
 2. Correspondence.
 3. Personal.
 4. Photographs.
 5. Office.
 6. Miscellaneous.
