Biography/History
Norris Hundley, Jr. was born on October 26, 1935 in Houston, Texas. He received his AB from Whittier College in 1958, and his PhD from the University of California, Los Angeles in 1963. His long and distinguished teaching career began as a professor of American history at the University of Houston (1963-1964), and then continued at UCLA (1964-1994), where he became professor emeritus of American history in 1994. As a scholar, he authored over a hundred books and essays, including several groundbreaking works on the history of water usage in California and the West. He is best known for his work on Western water rights, particularly The Great Thirst: Californians and Water, 1770s-1990s (1992). He co-authored one of only two books on the St. Francis Dam disaster of 1928 in the Santa Clarita Valley. Hundley was also the editor of the Pacific Historical Review for 29 years (1968-1997), during which time the journal took a leading role in the development of environmental and ethnic studies. He held leadership positions in many historical organizations, including the Western History Association (president, 1994-1995) and the American Historical Association, Pacific Coast Branch (president, 1994-1995). In addition, Hundley served as the director of the UCLA Latin American Center from 1989-1994, chair of the UCLA Program on Mexico from 1981-1994, and sat on various boards and committees related to the history of California and water usage rights. The last book he co-authored, Heavy Ground: William Mulholland and the St. Francis Dam Disaster (2015), was published posthumously and remains the authoritative text on the St. Francis Dam disaster. Hundley passed away on April 28, 2013.
Scope and Content
Collection consists of peer review files for the Pacific Historical Review (PHR), chiefly correspondence, and materials related to the research and publication of The Great Thirst (1992, 2000 revised edition) and Water and the West (2009, second edition). Files include extensive exhibits, transcripts, and filings from The City of Los Angeles vs. The City of San Fernando, et al., a major pueblo water rights case which included the cities of Glendale, Burbank, and others, and established precedent for water rights pertaining to the Los Angeles River. The exhibits for the case include copies of Spanish and Mexican documents from the Los Angeles City Archives and the Department of Water and Power, in addition to copies of early case material and texts. Materials used for the revised edition of The Great Thirst and Water and the West include extensive clippings and research files, and several reels of microfilm containing documents from the Library of Congress and the National Archives. The collection also includes fifty-five 3.5 inch floppy disks and six CDs, containing correspondence, manuscripts, research, interviews, slide photographs, and photographs. Other materials include reports, correspondence, and personal accounts related to Hundley’s activities as a UCLA professor, such as the firing of Angela Davis in 1970 and a group of UCLA historians that went to the 1965 March on Montgomery. Lastly, the collection contains numerous water usage project reports from California and other parts of the West. The PHR correspondence is sealed until 2020 to protect the confidentiality of contributors and reviewers.
