Biography

Steve Louie, an Asian-American activist, compiled the Steve Louie Asian-American Movement Collection which focuses on the Asian American Movement that spanned the late 1960s and 1970s. Louie participated in the Asian American Movement across the U.S., but spent the majority of his time in California.

In 1949, Steve Louie was born in San Francisco. In 1967, Louie was accepted to Occidental College. He was heavily influenced by the Black Panther Party and Mao Tse-Tung, which led him to first volunteer at a community storefront in Watts and then join the Los Angeles chapter of the Asian American Political Alliance (AAPA). He was a founding member of the Asian Alliance, the first Asian student group at Occidental that successfully organized the first Asian American history class and was an active member in the Third World student coalition. During his junior year in 1969, Louie received the Richter Fellowship which enabled him to travel to San Francisco, Boston, and New York and participate in the Asian American Movement taking place in these respective cities. During his time on the east coast, Louie met comrade and colleague, Glenn Omatsu, who was organizing at Yale.

After completing his junior year, Louie left school to become a full-time organizer in the growing Asian American movement. He moved to San Francisco and initially worked with the Japanese Community Youth Council in Japantown. While working in Japantown in 1971, he helped form Joint Communications, a support program for Asian prisoners in Northern California. He also began working at the Asian Community Center in Chinatown and became an active member of organizations such as U.S.-China Friendship Association and Wei Min She (Serve the People), an Asian American anti-imperialist organization. In 1973, he began working on a truck dock as both a worker and a labor organizer.
While he was a part of Wei Min She, he served as a photographer and the co-editor for the organization's publication, Wei Min. The organization operated out of the Asian Community Center, located in the basement of the International Hotel (a low-income housing building for the elderly) in San Francisco's Chinatown. The geographic location was significant not only for its proximity to the Asian community, but also as a site of struggle for tenants' rights. Louie was one of the many active community members against the eviction of International Hotel residents in 1977. While working at the Asian Community Center in 1971, Louie met his wife Mary Chin with whom he started a family.

In addition to his work as a labor organizer and member of Wei Min She, Louie has worked closely with organizing Asian-American Studies centers in colleges and universities across the U.S., anti-war (Vietnam) actions, Marxist-Leninist-Mao Tse-Tung study groups, Asian-American prisoners, and Japanese-American youth. In 1997, Louie and Omatsu co-taught a course at UCLA entitled, "The Asian American Movement," which examined the Movement, its legacy, and its relevance to current social struggles. They further collaborated to edit the anthology, Asian Americans: The Movement and the Moment, which was published in 2001 by the UCLA Asian American Studies Center Press.

Steve Louie currently resides in San Francisco and is semi-retired.

Scope and Content
The collection contains a variety of media - newspapers, subject files, posters, buttons, and t-shirts. The materials were generated by the collective efforts of students, community organizations, activists, and independent political presses as a means of political organizing during the Asian American Movement of the 1960s-1970s. The materials reflect the breadth of political ideologies and organizations represented within the Asian American movement. They intend to provide an overall but not comprehensive view of the Movement. Louie also collected a handful of materials produced by other movement struggles such as the Black Panther Party, Black Liberation Front, the United Farmworkers Union, and the Revolutionary Communist Party. The photocopied newsletters from the Japanese American Committee for Democracy (New York) were produced during World War II and represent some of the oldest materials in the collection; the dates span from 1945 to 1947.

Organization and Arrangement
The collection is organized into five series based on type of medium - newspapers, subject files, posters, buttons, and t-shirts. The organization of the collection adheres to the original order of the collector Steve Louie, with the exception of materials that were obviously out of order chronologically or alphabetically.

1. Newspapers
2. Subject Files
3. Posters
4. Buttons
5. T-shirts

Processing Note
When the collection was donated to UCLA in 1997, Steve Louie provided an item level description of the collection. The collection's original organization has been maintained and Louie's descriptions are the basis of the finding aid. In January 2008 the collection was processed by Tiffany-Kay Sangwand, with assistance from Kelley Bachli in the Center for Primary Research and Training (CFPRT).

Series 1. Newspapers

Scope and Content Note

The Newspapers series contains longer runs of better known community newspapers as well as individual issues of smaller publications. The main newspapers represented in the collection are Gidra, Asian American Political Alliance, Red Guard Community News, Getting Together, and Wei Min. The collection does not contain complete runs of these newspapers. Box 1 of newspapers contains Asian American Political Alliance, Gidra and miscellaneous publications organized alphabetically and chronologically. Box 2 and Box 9 contain Getting Together and Wei Min organized chronologically, respectively.

Steve Louie created a subject index to guide users through the newspapers. The index categories are as follows: campus struggles for Asian American Studies, anti-Vietnam War / struggles against imperialism, International Hotel / struggle against community destruction, labor struggles, Asian American women: the woman's question, U.S.-China Peoples' Friendship, Asian American organizations, international situation, resources for Asian American Studies, and polemics.

The Campus Struggles for Asian American Studies category refers to articles on college campuses' struggle for Ethnic Studies, high school organizing against repression and for curricular reform, and community organizing around busing, bilingual education and curriculum reform.

The Anti-Vietnam War / Struggle against Imperialism category refers to articles on anti-war actions and the U.S.' political involvement with Vietnam.

The Labor Struggles category refers to articles on the labor history of Asian Americans, organizing within the garment industry, restaurants and the U.S. Postal Service.

The Asian American Women: The Woman's Question category refers to articles written on sexism within the movement and Asian American community.

The U.S.-China Peoples' Friendship category refers to articles on meetings between Americans and visiting Chinese through the U.S.-China Peoples' Friendship Association.

The Asian American Organizations category refers to articles relating to the Wei Min She of the San Francisco Chinatown, the Asian American Political Alliance and Third World Liberation Front at UC Berkeley, the Asian American Political Alliance at San Francisco State College, the Asian Americans for Action of New York City and I Wor Kuen of New York and San Francisco's Chinatown.

The International Situation category refers to articles on world politics outside of Asia.

The Resources for Asian American Studies category refers to articles with themes of identity, history, interethic solidarity, arts and culture, and model minority stereotype of Asian Americans.

The Polemics category relates to articles on the political differences between organizations.

One of the most well-known Asian American movement newspapers and was first published in 1969. Students organizing for Asian American Studies at UCLA started the newspaper, but it soon evolved into a newspaper for the wider Asian American community in Los Angeles. The newspaper was published monthly and in English only; its main readership consisted of youth. The newspaper's namesake was Ghidra, a monster in Japanese cinema.

Series 2. Subject Files

Scope and Content Note
The Subject Files series complement the information covered in the newspapers. They contain additional information related to Asian American organizations, such as Asian Americans for Action (New York City), Wei Min She (San Francisco), Japanese American Committee for Democracy (New York City), Asian American Political Alliance (UC Berkeley), Asian American Concern (UC Davis), U.S.-Chinese Peoples' Friendship Association (San Francisco), and other student groups at the high school and university level across California and on the east coast. The subject files also include materials related to anti-Vietnam War efforts, the International Hotel, curriculum materials and the establishment of Asian American Studies and centers in colleges and universities across the U.S., Asian American conferences, and postal workers' organizing.

The first half of the subject files, from Asian Americans for Action to U.S.-Chinese Peoples' Friendship Association, is material that directly relates to Asian American organizing. The second half from Postal Workers to Miscellaneous Movements' Materials relates to organizing efforts by other communities.

Series 4. Buttons

Scope and Content Note
The Buttons series contains buttons related to organizing struggles such as International Workers’ Day, International Women’s Day, United Farmworkers’ “Boycott Grapes” campaign, anti-war efforts, anti-eviction actions, anti-racism protests, postal workers’ unions, and sovereignty movements (Okinawa and Puerto Rico). Three are related to political figures — President John F. Kennedy, Presidential candidate George Wallace, and Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley. The buttons are arranged in the order in which they were received by the collector Steve Louie.
