Scope and Content
This collection contains political newspapers published in Buenos Aires, Argentina from 1812 to 1851. The collection includes the following publications: La abeja argentina, El abogado nacional, Archivo Americano y espíritu de la prensa del mundo, El centinela, Diario de sesiones, El duende de Buenos Ayres, La gazeta de Buenos Ayres/La gaceta de Buenos Aires, La Gaceta Mercantil, Lucero, El Oficial del Día, and El observador. In addition, there is one document on medical issues published in Spain and written in Latin in 1786, entitled Quaestiones medicae sortitae et lege praefixo 10 dier. Termino typis mandatae.

The collection is primarily in Spanish, with some English, French, and Latin, and cover Argentine social, political, economic, commercial, governmental, religious, and cultural issues. Researchers interested in international issues should consult El Archivo Americano y Espíritu de la Prensa del Mundo, El Abogado Nacional, La Gazeta de Buenos Ayres, and Lucero. Researchers with interest in the caudillo dictator Juan Manuel de Rosas should consult El Archivo Americano y Espíritu de la Prensa del Mundo, La Gaceta Mercantil, and Lucero. Researchers interested in Bolivar should consult El Duende de Buenos Ayres.

Coverage of news regarding Buenos Aires, both province and city, is particularly strong throughout the collection and demonstrates the many newspaper sources dating from shortly after Argentine independence through the mid-19th century.

Organization and Arrangement
The collection is arranged alphabetical by publication title and chronologically within each title.
Box 1 contains La abeja argentina, El abogado nacional, Archivo americano y espíritu de la prensa del mundo, El centinela, El duende de Buenos Ayres, La gazeta de Buenos Ayres/La gaceta de Buenos Aires, El oficial del día, and El observador. The folders are arranged alphabetically by name of publication and chronologically within each folder.

Box 2 contains Diario de Sesiones from Buenos Aires and Río de la Plata. They are organized by location and chronologically. Box 2 also contains the item in the Miscellaneous series, Quaestiones medicae sortitae et lege praefixo 10 dier. Termino typis mandatae.

Box 3 contains La gaceta mercantile. Each issue is in a separate folder in chronological order.

Box 4 contains the bound volume of Lucero organized in chronological order.

La Gaceta Mercantil 1827-1850
Scope and Content Note
La Gaceta Mercantil: Diario comercial, politico y literario was a daily publication running from 1823-1852. It provides a detailed glimpse into the political and commercial life of 19th century Buenos Aires as well as the literary, intellectual and cultural life of the province. It was edited by Stephen Hallet, an Irish-born printer living in Buenos Aires and includes articles, editorials, minutes of government sessions, international news, letters to the editor, poetry, ship arrivals, mail schedule, weather and time of sunrise and sunset, and announcements in Spanish and English. Announcements include help wanted, lost and found, sale, event announcements, change of address, auction and estate sales, and real estate sales. The articles are written from a strong pro-Rosas, federalist perspective. The March 31, 1840 issue contains a papal letter of Gregory XVI that forbids slave trade; the letter was printed in English and Latin.

La Gazeta de Buenos Ayres 1812-1820

La Gazeta de Buenos Ayres, which changed its name to La Gaceta de Buenos Aires in 1820, is the oldest run of newspapers in the collection. The series contains an incomplete run of newspapers from January 10, 1812 to June 28, 1820; the majority of the issues are from 1818 to 1820. La Gazeta de Buenos Aires was a weekly newspaper printed in Spanish by Imprenta de los Niños Expósitos, which was shortened to Imprenta de los Expositos in 1818. The articles and letters to the editor generally pertain to politics in Argentina, South America and Europe. Topics include the military exploits of Napoleon and Bolivar, the Inquisition in Spain, and political affairs in France, England, Spain, Portugal, and Chile. The end of the publication includes ship arrivals and departures and notices of items wanted and for sale. This section also includes notices on slaves that were missing and for sale.

El Lucero 1833

Lucero: Diario Político, Literario, y Mercantil was a daily publication edited by Pedro de Angelis (1784-1859), a Neapolitan émigré who became one of Argentina’s early historians. He edited and published a number of important historical documents and published Crónica política y literaria de Buenos Aires (1829), in addition to Lucero. He is often reviled by contemporary historians for his work in support of Rosas during the dictator’s rule. Lucero contained national and international news, police news, official documents, general announcements, and notices of auctions and sales.
