Biographical Note

Ralph Edwards was born near Merino, Colorado, in 1913, moving with his family to Oakland, California, when he was 12. He worked his way through college at radio stations in Oakland and San Francisco, graduating from the University of California at Berkeley in 1935 with a Bachelor of Arts degree in drama. Edwards moved to New York in 1936 and became one of radio's busiest announcers, doing as many as 45 network shows a week. In 1940, in response to this hectic pace, Edwards created, produced and hosted the landmark audience participation show "Truth or Consequences".

The show's great popularity led to his appearance in the Lucille Ball-Victor Mature film Seven Days' Leave (1942). He moved the show and his production company to Hollywood in 1945, where he made three more films for RKO: Radio Stars on Parade (1945), The Bamboo Blonde (1946) and Beat the Band (1947), all with Frances Langford. His big-screen career took a decided back seat in 1948, when Edwards first brought to the air his other long-running show, "This Is Your Life" (1952). On radio for its first two years, Edwards took the program to NBC-TV in 1952, where it remained until 1961, winning two Emmys (he also hosted a syndicated version from 1971-1973). His last feature film appearance came in the Susan Hayward MGM bio-pic of Lillian Roth, I'll Cry Tomorrow (1955), which ends with a recreation of Roth's appearance on "This Is Your Life" (1952).

Edwards' television career began in earnest in 1950, when "Truth or Consequences" (1950) aired one season on CBS-TV and earned the first Emmy awarded for an audience participation show. He turned over host duties to Jack Bailey in 1954 and, in 1956, launched the career of Bob Barker as host of the daytime version. Edwards, also well-known for his extensive charitable and philanthropic activities, became one of TV's most prolific producers. Biographical note courtesy of IMDB.com.

This is Your Life. Series 1. 1952-1987.

Scope and Content Note

This Is Your Life is a television documentary series hosted by its producer, Ralph Edwards. It originally aired in the United States from 1952 to 1961, and again in 1972 on NBC. It originated as a radio show airing from 1948 to 1952 on NBC Radio. A version of it continues a very long run in the United Kingdom starting in 1955, and another version is still running in Australia. It has also been broadcast from time to time in New Zealand and Scandinavia. Concept: The format of the show consisted of the host, who would surprise someone (usually a celebrity or public figure, occasionally an ordinary citizen) and, consulting his "red book", conduct a biography of the subject in a television studio. The subject would be presented with family members and old friends, reunited with old acquaintances, and often shed a tear when a personal tragedy was recounted.

Truth or Consequences. Series 2. 1940-1988.

Scope and Content Note

This program was Ralph Edwards' first radio show. As its host, Edwards asked contestants humorous questions and made them "pay" the consequences for missed answers by performing unusual and often elaborate and outlandish stunts. The program aired for 38 consecutive years on radio and television, and launched the career of Edwards' handpicked successor, Bob Barker. The program aired on the first day of commercial television broadcasting in the United States. See also: Series 8, "Ralph Edwards Appearances on other Programs" for Ralph Edwards doing segments of "Truth or Consequences" on other programs.

Funny Boners. Series 5. 1954-1955.

Scope and Content Note

Funny Boners was a children's version of the nighttime game show Truth or Consequences, both of which were developed by executive producer Ralph Edwards. The show was hosted by ventriloquist Jimmy Weldon and his dummies Webster Webfoot, a bragging duck, and Easy Marvin. If a contestant answered a question incorrectly, he or she would have to pay the consequences by performing an embarrassing stunt.

The Ralph Edwards Show. Series 13. 1952.

Scope and Content Note

The Ralph Edwards Show was one of the first daytime variety shows: a combination of music, skits, comedy, contests, and "Truth or Consequences" type acts. Some of the regular features included FABULOUS FOLKS (interviews with interesting people), WHERE ARE THEY NOW (stars of the past), and RETURN ENGAGEMENT (serviceman & entertainers they had heard in camp or overseas). It premiered 1/14/52 and aired Mon/Wed/Fri, expanding to five days a week 3/31/52. The last show was 5/16/52. Announcers were Hal Gibney, Ed King, and Jerry Lawrence; cast included muscle man Steve Reeves (before Ed Wood and Hercules made him famous), comedienne Sara Berner (as cleaning lady Mrs. Haggarty), singer Carol Richards, and musical trio the Varieteers.

- Box 53 Photographs and Slides.

Superior Court. Series 17. 1986-1989.

Scope and Content Note

This courtroom drama was patterned after The People's Court, with a notable exception - this story-driven version featured scripted re-enactments of actual trials. Produced in association with Stu Billett Productions and announced by Chuck Riley, the show aired three seasons in syndication.

Who in the World. Series 18. 1962.

Scope and Content Note

The original concept of this summer replacement show was for Warren Hull to interview people who had made headlines in the previous week. When enough people fitting this category could not be found, the format changed to include human interest stories.
