Biographical Note

Russian born Philip Kahgan emigrated to the United States in 1909 when he was seventeen. He served as first chair violist with the Los Angeles Philharmonic from 1921 through 1941 and frequently appeared as a soloist.

After leaving the Philharmonic, Kahgan became well known for his ability to quickly gather symphonic ensembles for recordings, concerts or films. Many of these groups performed at the Hollywood Bowl.

For nearly 50 years, he both performed in and assembled the orchestras for many of Paramount Studio's pictures. He was also musical contractor for the Glendale Symphony, the San Francisco and Pasadena Opera companies and the Los Angeles Master Chorale.

In 1945, Kahgan provided musicians for the Los Angeles County Museum Sundry chamber concert series. He worked at this until shortly before his death in 1986.
