Acquisition Information
Historical note
In 1936, UC President Robert Sproul appointed the Committee on Drama, Lectures, and Music (later known as the Committee on Fine Arts Production and currently known as the Center for Performing Arts) to present one musical event on campus each year. The first event sponsored by the Committee occurred on February 4, 1937 when the Vienna Choir Boys performed on the UCLA campus. During the 1960's, under the leadership of Frances Inglis, the Center built a national and international reputation for the size and sophistication of its programs. In 1973, Inglis was succeeded by Edmond Harris, who increased the number of programs and encouraged works by new and avant-garde artists. In 1979, Harris was succeeded by Pebbles Wadsworth.
Scope and Content
Record Series 274 contains clippings files assembled by the Committee on Fine Arts Productions. Clippings files contain reviews, announcements, and listings from various Southern California newspapers documenting concerts, plays, dance performances, and film screenings held at UCLA or related venues, and sponsored by the Committee on Fine Arts Productions/Center for Performing Arts. Additionally, files includes newsletters, programs, and a variety of promotional material such as photographs, brochures, and announcements. Files also include materials of the Design for Sharing program.
This is an active record series; additional University records are expected to be added.
