Historical Note
The Center for the Study of Women (CSW) was established in September 1984 by the UC Board of Regents with a research focus on women, gender and sexuality. It was the first organized research unit to focus on women and gender-related issues in the UC System. Its mission is to develop and foster research emerging out of women’s experiences collectively or as individuals and returning that to the community; to facilitate productive scholarly relationships; and to aid recruitment and retention efforts. It is funded by the UCLA Division of Social Sciences as part of it’s commitment to gender equity and research parity at UCLA. The Center develops, promotes, and disseminates faculty and graduate student research and administers grants, conferences and seminars. The founding director of the Center is Karen Rowe.
Scope and Content
Record Series 413 contains the administrative files of the Center for the Study of Women from 1972-2006. Files include grant and funding records; reports and publications; research files; and course materials.
This is an active record series; additional University records are expected to be added.
