Historical note
The National Network of Hispanic Women (NNHW), was a national resource center that linked professional women with one another providing role models for young Hispanics.
According to Sylvia Castillo, founder of NNHW and a UCSB alumnus, the intent of the organization is for the material to be used to encourage and promote the continuation of gender and ethnic studies, feminist research and debate to further the understanding of the socio-political experiences of Hispanic women in American society.
"For the first generation of college-educated Hispanic women there were no role models or mentors that could help them fill the gap between the experiences of their blue-collar parents and the career choices that a university education provided," said Castillo, who taught the first course on Chicanas at UCSB in 1973.
Previously, primary sources documenting Hispanic women have been unpublished dissertations and government documents. "Because of the opportunities UCSB had given me to develop myself, I feel that alumni have the responsibility to contribute back to the university," added Castillo. "The collection will provide research initiatives and ensure that the threads of our experiences are not lost."
Formalized in 1980, the NNHW addressed issues such as developing a national leadership campaign to create a National Federation of Hispanic Women Leaders and Presidents of Volunteer Organizations. The archives consist of organizational records, correspondence files, photographs, publications, reports, and ephemera.
Scope and Content
This collection is arranged into 5 series and is listed in alphabetical order.
Series 1. Administrative files. This series contains internal organizational files including incoming and outgoing correspondence, project proposals, fundraising and financial documentation, seminar and conference organizational material and more.
Series 2. Publications. This series contains publications published internally as well as externally. Internal files include Intercambios Feminiles, and drafts and writings. External files include statistics on women employment, sex discrimination, health services, women psychology, minorities in business, and more.

Series 3. Photographs. Included in this series are photographs from various award ceremonies and conferences from around the 1980’s. Also included are physical copies of several organizational member resumes.

Series 4. Audio and visual recordings. This series contains video recordings associated with various events. The audio recordings in this series are commercial audio reels from Jazz artist Gabor Szabo. Also included are tapes from various conferences and seminars related to the organization.

Series 5. Ephemera. This series contains several miscellaneous collected objects such as: the key to the city Dade, a mug, buttons, etc.

Arrangement

This collection was archived to maintain its provenance following original naming structures and organization by creator Sylvia Castillo.
