Historical Note
Founded by Lewis Hill in the 1940s, Pacifica Radio (a division of the Pacifica Foundation) was grounded in Hill’s pacifist ideals and devoted itself to upholding the First Amendment through its alternative radio programming. Pacifica's first fledgling station KPFA-FM in Berkeley, CA went on the air on April 15, 1949. Unique for its non-commercial structure and its listener sponsored rather than government supported financial organization, KPFA established itself as a locale for minority voices during a period of intense scrutiny and unease—the Cold War. KPFA won several distinctions in the early years of its tenure, such as broadcast awards for a feature by Alexander Meiklejohn about the First Amendment and a Robin Hood series by Chuck Levy and Virginia Maynard, as well as the George Foster Peabody Award for its programs rooted against McCarthyism. Pacifica's strident stance against the accusatory politics of the US Cold War eventually led to an investigation from the House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC) and the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee (SIISS) into the activities of the organization. In 1962, the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) conducted their own investigation into Pacifica for its alleged communist ties, resulting in the withholding of various Pacifica Radio license renewals (these were eventually renewed in 1964).
As KPFA successfully traversed the airways and gained traction for its innovative programming, Pacifica founded its second station in Los Angeles in 1959, KPFK-FM. This was followed by the accession in 1960 of the commercial station WBAI in New York from philanthropist Louis Schweitzer, the creation of KPFT in Houston, TX with the guidance of journalist Larry Lee in 1970, and the 1977 construction of WPFW in Washington D.C. This collection includes folios from the early years of each of these five stations, booklets that informed subscribers about Pacifica stations' radio schedules and features. Many of these folios also advertise Pacifica in an effort to acquire listener support, which was instrumental to their survival on the radio. At the time of the collection's organization, KPFA, KPFK, WBAI, KPFT, and WPFW remain on-air.
Bibliography:

Scope and Content
