Scope and Content of Collection

'Instructional Development is a service organization supporting the instructional mission of the campus. Its activities directly address the major goal in the campus' formal Academic Planning Statement, 'Insure Excellence in Both Undergraduate and Graduate Instruction'. The mission of Instructional Development is to foster a climate for excellence in instruction, which parallels the climate for excellence in research, within the context of a world class institution of higher education. The mission is addressed by following a model which has evolved over the past two decades. The organizational structure and functioning of Instructional Development reflects the model. The organization has a substantial impact on the quality of instruction offered at UCSB. It is able to address comprehensively and effectively the needs of a faculty which teaches a tremendous range of subject matter, using a wide range of teaching philosophies, methods, styles, and technologies. The key elements required to address effectively this diversity of faculty needs include: instructional consulting and evaluation; technical media production support; and technical media display support. All are provided by Instructional Development."

From the Instructional Development website, http://id.ucsb.edu/

Instructional Development was formerly known as Learning Resources until 1992. ID offers Instructional Consultation, Classroom Services, Production Services, and Technical Services. The collection contains memos, flyers, handbooks and guides, newsletters, proposals, and conference papers.
