Biographical/Historical note
In 1922 the City of Santa Barbara made the decision to abandon the then 47 year old building they were using as a City Hall and construct a new building. The architectural firm of Sauter and Lockard was chosen to design a new City Hall building that could accommodate more people and house more city departments. Construction started in 1922 and the new City Hall building, located within Plaza de la Guerra, opened its doors in 1924.
The firm Sauter and Lockard was composed of architects Roland F. Sauter and E. Keith Lockard and was based in Santa Barbara, California during the 1920s.
